"LOVE BIRD" COUPLE ARE UNDISMAYED

(Photo by International News Reel)

BURTON S. TUCKER AND HIS BRIDE

Here's sixteen-year-old Bay State boy and his bride of fifty smiling off the years that stand between them. She calls them love "eternal." He says he'll never leave her. Their moneymoon has been interrupted by a probe into their "May and December" marriage. Meantime they're happy as can be in their love nest built for two.

PACT BARED IN GRILLING BY COAKLEY

In the tiniest courtroom in Boston Meyer Berman sat today as Daniel H. Coakley, disbarred Boston attorney conducting his own defence in the $50,000 shakedown suit, heckled him with brilliantly composed interrogations.

Coakley shoots verbal [illegible] poison dipped that Berman may stumble into traps which will shatter the allegations that Coakley as a member of Boston's blackmail ring shook him down for the 50,000 he seeks to recover.

Berman is not an educated man.

COLLEGE RAIDED; 27 ARE SEIZED

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 4.—Armed with subpoenas issued at the direction of the grand jury, eight deputy sheriffs, under the direction of County Detective Edward J. Hickey, "raided" the Blumer College of Natureopathy at No. 409 Ann street.

Professor Blumer, president of the institution, and 26 students and professors were marched to the county building, where they were quizzed by members of the grand jury.

Of the students who appeared before the jury one was a former hodcarrier, another a telegram messenger, an ex-carpenter and three young women. They were individually called to the clerk's desk to disclose their identities and previous occupations.

BLACK HAND SLAYS VICTIM AFTER DRUGGING FAMILY

New York, Dec. 4.—Dominick Maggio, who laughed three weeks ago, when he received a letter signed with a smeary black hand, demanding money or his life, was shot dead today in his Brooklyn home after his wife, three children and himself had been chloroformed.

Gas masks, the empty chloroform bottle, the murder gun and the two empty cartridges were left by the slayers beside their victims bed.

His wife, only semi-conscious from the fumes of the drug that had been sprayed with an atomizer, heard the shots and made a feebel attempt to aid him, but she was felled by a blow on the head.

After Mrs. Maggio had been revived she told a story of her husband's enemies that led to the arrest of two suspects. One established an alibi and was released, but the other was held for examination.

Mrs. Maggio said there were three men in the murder party. They entered through a window and began spraying the drug. It took immediate effect on the children, but Maggio and his wife were only dazed.

DRY AGENTS IN GUN FIGHT; ONE KILLED, TWO INJURED

Alliance, O., Dec. 4.—With one man in the morgue and two in Alliance City Hospital, victims of a gun battle between prohibition agents and inmates of Nick Marku's general store here, Alliance police, armed with riot guns, today are scouring the woods for Marku, who is blamed for the shooting.

John S. Marku, twenty-nine, was shot down and instantly killed in the gun fray. Thomas Crawford of East Palestine, leader of the raiding party, and Tom Sokach of this city, believed to have been a bystander, were wounded.

According to police, Marku began shooting the moment the prohibition raiders entered his place. After the shooting he fled.

WIDOW SUES FOR $10,000 LOVE BALM

Portland Woman Says Late Husband Led Dual Life; Accuses Haverhill Rival

Haverhill, Dec. 4.—Alleging her husband lived a double life during the last years of his life, Mrs. Mary S. Maxwell, 55, No. 55 Pleasant avenue, Portland, Me., has filed an alienation suit for $10,000 against Mrs. Oroa E. Moody, 50-year-old widow of Haverhill, with whom she alleges he lived in this city from May, 122.

Maxwell, a traveling salesman, selling cotton and thread, fifty years of age, died in the Gale Hospital here on October 17, 1923, of heart trouble.

Information gleaned by his daughter, Jean Maxwell, thirty-three, Portland woman automobile salesman at the time of his death, led to knowledge that her father had no broken off alleged relations with Mrs. Moody, [illegible] for many years, as he is claimed to have agreed when the wife and daughter learned of his alleged dual life.

Mrs. Moody's home is at No. 14 North street, this city. Her bank account has been attached by Mrs. Maxwell.

Maxwell, ostensibly keeping his home in Portland with his wife and daughter, maintained his business headquarters in Haverhill. Wife and daughter allege, in the former's complaint, that he also maintained his home here with Mrs. Moody.

The complaint alleges that the "defendant on May 1, 1922, willfully and wrongfully ingratiated herself into the affections of the plaintiff's husband" and that up to his death on October 17, "the plaintiff lost his comfort, affection and support."

DAUGHTER SUSPICIOUS.

Attorney Ralph Taylor, counsel for Mrs. Maxwell, stated that investigations of the wife and daughter established to their satisfaction that husband and father had interests outside his real home.

On May, 1922, the date mentioned in the complaint, Maxwell was ill at his Portland home, and asked his daughter to send a money order to "O. E. Moody" of Haverhill. She suggested a check but he refused and she sent the money order.

Suspicion grew from this and the dilaughter came to Haverhill.

She went to the North street address and claims to have then found her father was living there in the same house with Mrs. Moody.

She had an interview with him and says he promised to stop the alleged alliance. She also claims

INSIST ON DEFEAT OF GILLETT

G. O. P. Insurgents Declare They Will Continue Deadlock to Beat Speaker

Washington, Dec. 4 (I.N.S.).—The insurgent mouse again held the Republican cat at bay today, and continued the spectacle of a Congress that cannot function because of the inability of its leaders to organize it for business.

The militant little band of Republican irregulars from the Northwest who threw the works into confusion at the opening of the session were apparently as determined as ever this morning not to permit the reelection of Speaker Frederick H. Gillett until they have assurances that the rules of the House will be liberalized to insure votes on legislation instead of having bills smothered in committees.

BOTH BANK ON PUBLIC.

The grim and somewhat contemptuous leaders of the House apparently were equally determined not to surrender to the demands of the insurgents, and another day a deadlock was in prospect. Both sides are banking on public support.

Republican Floor Leader Longworth said:

"I do not believe the country will endorse the attitude of twenty-two members of the House, claiming to be a part of the 225 Republican membership, in preventing the opening of Congress and delaying legislation that is important to all the people."

Representative John M. Nelson, Republican, Wisconsin, the insurgent leader, said:

FIGHTING OLD GUARD.

"We are not obstructionists. It is the Old Guard members who are preventing organization of Congress and delaying a start on needed legislation. We ask only that there shall be a change in House rules so as to allow a majority of House members to vote on legislation.

"The old rules do not permit this and the House leaders are greasing the machinery for adoption of the old rules.

"We seek nothing for ourselves. As a matter of fact, a majority of the whole House favors liberalizing the rules. At least sixty regular Republicans and scores of Democrats have told us they hope we win our fight, but so strong is the fear of 'going off the reservation' they won't support us openly.

DEFY OLD GUARD.

"We have not asked for a committee assignment. All we want is a liberalization of the rules, or even a chance to vote on the question of liberalising the rules, and we are going to fight until we get it. They are afraid to allow the question of liberalising the rules to be voted upon for they know it would quickly be made impossible for legislation to be pocketed and smothered in committee."

FAMILIES RESCUED IN BRIGHTON FIRE

Scantily clad residents with screaming children raced into the street today when a fire which originated in a store formerly occupied as a soft drink parlor by Thomas Casey, at No. 381 Market street, Brighton, spread to an empty store adjacent, and up through the ceilings of both stores into the homes of Thomas Kernan and Harold Roe, who live in adjoining apartments.

Mrs. Kernan was awakened by the smoke and aroused her husband. He

BABY WAIF IS FOUND COOING IN AN AUTO

A healthy, kicking, cooing baby boy, apparently two to three days old, was left early today in an automobile in McLean street, West End. Police are seeking the owner of the car, thought to be a physician attending a case in a nearby institution.

The babe was turned over to the Chardon street home for the day. Then it will be handed over to the State, if the parents are not found.

It is well formed and in excellent physical condition. It wore a baby shirt of excellent grade, but with other coverings of poor quality.

These consisted of a blue blanket, part of a man's knitted sweater and a knitted scarf.

Authorities at the Chardon street home are not allowed to dispose of children in their care. Therefore, it is useless for any who might seek to adopt this homeless babe to apply there. However, it may be adopted in the regular way of application through State channels, after being turned over to the Commonwealth.

19 PLAYERS KILLED IN 1923 FOOTBALL SEASON

Chicago, Dec. 4.—Nineteen football players were fatally injured during the 1923 season, according to figures compiled by the Chicago Tribune. Of this number nine were high school players, five were from colleges and universities and four were professional or independent players. Fractured skulls and injured backs caused a majority of the deaths.

One player died of strangulation. He was chewing tobacco and strangled when he was tackled, dying on the field.

RICH ORPHAN SHOOTS SELF WHEN CHUM ENDED LIFE

Baltimore, Dec. 4.—Clarence Watson Wheelwright, twenty-two years old, son of the late Jere H. Wheelwright, shot himself at his home today in the same room and with the same pistol with which his chum, Francis T. Redwood, Jr., committed suicide last April.

Young Wheelwright's condition was pronounced critical. He shot himself in the stomach.

Clarence Wheelwright and his brother, Jere, were reputed to be the wealthiest orphans in Baltimore. His father was president of the Consolidation Coal Company. Clarence married Miss Agnes Gross, daughter of John M. Gross of Bethlehem, Pa., last June.

PONZI APPEALS TO COOLIDGE FOR PARDON

Washington, Dec. 4 (C.N.S.).—Charles Ponzi, once credited as a "wizard of foreign exchange" who was stripped of his wealth, which was wrested from the gullible, has applied to President Coolidge for a pardon.

Ponzi's appeal contains the declaration that he has suffered sufficiently. He asks clemency, not exoneration.

President Coolidge will turn over Ponzi's application to Attorney-General Daugherty without comment.

Ponzi was convicted of using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

PROBE HALTS 'LOVE BIRD' HONEYMOON

By ANNE DUNLAP
(Universal Service)

Ridgefield, N. J., Dec. 4—"Do you believe in love, Burt?"

The fifty-year-old Mrs. Susan O. Simpson, lately became Mrs. Burton S. Tucker, invited the arms of her sixteen-year-old bridegroom, moved toward him and breathed the question. She is her husband's great aunt.

The bridal pair occupied a deep, low-seated blue plush lounge in the parlor of the bride's house—a frame house with a patch of lawn and an atmosphere of strong perfumes and cigarette smoke.

The bridegroom blushed. Then he looked at his bride with a shy smile that shifted downward to his patent-leather shod feet. When he spoke in a boy's voice:

"I know lots of things, and I don't only believe in love. I know it."

"Kiss! Kiss Kiss!——"

They kissed, but the parrot couldn't leave off. Neither could the married pair.

"It is a love match, Burt? You didn't marry me for my money?"

The widow-bride's questions were coquetish and coaxing—and challenging. His answers were a valiant, worldly triumph over his very nat-

BREAK IN COTTON MARKET CAUSED BY HEAVY SELLING

New York, Dec. 4.—An excited opening of the New York cotton market today with a break of 77 to 100 points on first sales followed a smash in the Liverpool market over night after heavy continental and hedge selling. December declined to 35.25 and January to 34.90, representing $11 to $12 a bale loss from the recent high records.

Cotton futures opened easy: December, 35.75 to 34.25; January, 36.00 to 34.90; March, 35.30 to 34.97; May, 36.00 to 35.21; July, 34.93 to 34.40.

ural young bashfulness. He is extremely boyish with a sensitive oval face and dreamy, shadowed eyes. When there is no crimson mounting to his forehead with one of his speeches his face and hands take on a bluish pallor.

REAL "LOVE MATCH"

"I'll say it is a love match. Ddidn't I have to beg and plead with you long enough?"

"And didn't you say you'd work for me with a pick and shovel if you had to?"

"I said that, all right, and I would."

"But he will never do that, not if his people are thwarted in their selfish purpose. I mean to send him to Tech when we get back from our honeymoon in California—I guess it will be in about two weeks——"

The boy interjected:

"——Our little love-nest."

But—the practiced softness had vanished from her voice. This was the middle-aged woman and her power that was speaking:

"I mean to do that for him, to train him in the management of my business affairs ($2,000,000 in holdings was the sum suggested) and then to buy a seat for him on the stock exchange."

Burt, a bit uncertain in his grammar as yet, beamed on her. He breathed the mixed perfumes of her black bobbed hair. He gazed at the white shoulders bared by a filmy beaded afternoon dress.

CALLS LOVE "ETERNAL"

"You cannot say too much of their selfishness. They not only would rob him of his great love by separating him from me—he could not live without me, that I know—but they would also strip him of this opportunity to be a positive member of society, a man of position and affairs such as I can make him."

Some one ventured the query whether such love could last through a prosaic lifetime. She answered in that half-furtive, half-indolent way she has:

"Love like ours is eternal. It will last until death."

It was suggested that this flame might flicker in a space or so, and when perhaps ten years were past, and she had grown ten years older it might take a different course.

For the new Mrs. Tucker bears the full, heavy weight of her fifty years. She tells her history with greater frugality than she tells of her "greatest love."

She has a country home near Gloucester. There she met young Tucker—then fourteen—in the village drug store on Summer afternoons. They became friendly. His mother, one of her "old friends," begged her to bring him to New York. Often they went driving together, sometimes all three of them, more often just herself and Burt.

As to the hotel clerk's story of her taking a suite in the Pasadena, which property she owns, and again at the Ansonia, with the boy in her compan, Mrs. Tucker said:

"I don't want that mentioned. No; that isn't true. The only place we've been together is the Plaza, and then we've been living here since June."

WILL FIGHT FOR WIFE

Questioned about the affidavit she is said to have made protesting that young Tucker "had to marry her," he evaded direct reply.

"I know what I want; I want her for my wife," he said. "I love her and always will. I know, too, that the marriage can be annulled if I want it to be. But I don't want it annulled."

Official investigation of the legality of their marriage has led to an indefinite postponement of their honeymoon.

Assistant Prosecutor McMahon, investigating the legal side of the marriage, questioned the records of the clerk of vital statistics where the license was issued.

George Grebe, a clerk in the department, admitted he had changed the date on the application from September 30 to September 29 because the thirtieth was Sunday and he was convinced the later date was a clerical error. New Jersey law requires the lapse of seventy-two hours between the granting of the license and the performance of the ceremony.

AWAIT COURT CALL

Judge J. R. Tiffany, counsel for the young bridegroom, announced the couple had indefinitely postponed their honeymoon and would remain in this vicinity at the call of the prosecutor's office.

Tucker said he had come voluntarily to the prosecutor's office simply to show that he was not being held against his will. He reiterated his determination to fight efforts to annul the marriage, and declared the marriage was a love match and not an attempt to "slip around" any law of New Jersey or of any other state.

The prosecutor, however, is confident that indictments in the case would be obtained within a few days.

The boy admitted, said Mr. McMahon, that his relations with Mrs. Simpson, his grand-mother's half-sister, began almost two months before the marriage. He said Mrs. Simpson was in the habit of bringing her nephews and other young men relatives from Massachusetts "to see the sights of New York."

Burton's own mother, innocent of any idea of what seeing the sights consisted of, asked Mrs. Simpson, her own mother's half-sister, to take the so-far neglected Burton to New York. And Mrs. Simpson did. Last June Burton and his grand-aunt went to a boarding house in West Eighty-Third street. And there, he said, the intimacy began.

Mr. McMahon said that Tucker denied that he was held against his will by his wife, and said he had proposed several times before she accepted him. He told Mr. McMahon of saving $600 from selling papers, shovelling snow, and similar boy's work, and taking a trip a year ago to California, Oregon and Mexico. In Oregon, he said, he drove a laundry wagon for a time. Later he appeared in the movies.

Mr. McMahon said the boy talked with boyish bravado.

BILL AND COO

Grebe, according to McMahon, admitted dating the marriage license application a day back to make it appear that the pair had resided in New Jersey for the statutory period of seventy-two hours, necessary for the issuing of a license.

Muller, also according to McMahon, said that the bride, then still Mrs. Simpson, widow of the Rev. William Simpson, had asked him to help her draw up an affidavit which would help induce the boy to marry her without delay.

The love bird couple, as they call themselves, billed and cooed in their borrowed love-nest at Ridgefield, N. J., demonstrating their affection for each other by prolonged embraces which would make Gloria Swanson or Jack Pickford weep with jealous rage.

No fade out kiss on the screen ever trembled so long on two pair of luscious lips as that which Burton gave Susan when she urged the lad on with such passionate words as these:

"Burt has had many love affairs, but they were just puppy loves. Show the reporters how you love me, darling."

Burt certainly had the technique of the thing down pat, a woman reporter declared as she watched the kiss while a collaborator clocked it for a full three minutes and two-fifths of a second.

Postmaster Joseph Tucker of Essex has come out even stronger than previously against his daughter-in-law-aunt. He declared he will jail his son if it is necessary for him to take such a step "to save his soul from destruction."

Tucker, senior, is troubled only as to whether he can legally jail his son. Of one thing he is sure: that if the couple ever return to Massachusetts, where their marriage is illegal, he will have them both arrested.

"I shall try to have my son arrested and extradited for perjury," he said. "I would rather see my son in jail than see him married to that woman. She is a vampire in the real sense of the word. Her sinister and evil influence over my son robs him of all his will power.

"I know he will tire of her in a few months, but in the meanwhile the influence he is meeting will destroy his soul."

enjoyment out of the Republican family fight, said there would be no change in their attitude. They will continue to cast their votes for speaker for Representative Finish J. Garrett of Tennessee even though they do not want him elected. Likewise they will not make any deals with the Republican insurgents.

DEMOCRATS STAND PAT.

The latter sounded out Democratic leaders on this point, recalling that it was a coalition of Republican insurgents and Tammany Democrats that overthrew Cannonism in 1910, but Garrett and his associates were cold to the proposition. There is too much Democratic advantage in the present situation.

The insurgents, of course, have no hopes of electing their candidate for Speaker, Representative Henry Allen Cooper of Wisconsin. But with an equal division of strength between the Republicans and Democrats they can continue to throw their votes for Cooper and Martin Madden of Illinois and thus prevent any candidate receiving the majority necessary to elect. That is their program.

Meanwhile, of course, no bills can be introduced, no business transacted, no committees appointed—and the country is confronted with the spectacle of President Coolidge waiting to deliver two important communications to Congress, but finding it impossible because there is no congressional organization to receive them.

The Senate is as helpless as the House, because without the House functioning the Senate cannot either, except in a routine and desultory fashion.

He managed to get a man sleeping in a garage 100 feet to the rear of the house on the telephone and this man phoned in the alarm.

Kernan's pounding on the wall aroused the Rose family, in which there were two children. Both families fled to the street by way of the front door, through heavy smoke, scantily attired.

The first firemen to arrive found a high wind blowing the flames out on all sides of the building, and a second alarm immediately was sounded to keep the wind from spreading the fire to adjoining buildings.

After a hard battle the flames were subdued. The damage was estimated at $10,000. The cause of the fire is undetermined.

A similar fire occurred in the same building last February and caused damage estimated at $8,000.

FORCES BERMAN TO BARE PACT

He is a Jew of a past generation. By his side sits the Jew of today exemplified in his two sons, Sammy and Louie. Both are Harvard graduates.

The old man once ran a downtown hotel in Boston. Son Louie kept the books in that hostelry, while Sammy followed the leather business.

A partner in the hotel business was Isaac Gordon. It was while doing business at the Hotel Higgins that Berman was relieved of $50,000 in lump sums of $35,000 and $15,000.

Today in the parlor sized court room, Coakley cross-examining Berman, revealed that a contract had existed between Berman and Gordon whereby if one of the two were guilty of wrong or wicked misdeeds the firm would not bear the expense of the indiscretion.

Berman didn't remember such an agreement having existed but Coakley read into the records testimony taken during the Pelletier disbarment hearing when United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, Pelletier's counsel, extracted that admission from Berman, then a witness.

Coakley also extracted from Berman today admission that up to six months before the Supreme Court started the investigations of Coakley, Pelletier and others he considered himself Coakley's very good friend.

Berman, it appeared, hadn't thought of suing Coakley for $50,000 until e happened into the office of one Wasserman, attorney, where the matter came up.

"You didn't consider taking any action whatever after you paid the money until just before the Supreme Court proceedings?" said Coakley.

"No," replied the witness.

Coakley also revealed through investigation that Berman had once been a money lender.

Relative to the partnership agreement:

Q.—Didn't Gordon say at a conference relative to your paying out the money that it was not a firm expens,e, that you would have to pay it alone? A.—I don't remember.

WIDOW SEEKS $10,000 BALM

Mrs. Moody, after a talk with her, agreed to do the same.

In October Portland police, acting on advice from Haverhill, notified Mrs. Maxwell and her daughter that Maxwell was dying in the Gale Hospital.

The daughter came on and found he had been admitted from No. 14 North street. This caused her to believe her father had not kept his agreement; nor the widow hers.

It is claimed by Attorney Taylor that evidence in possession of the wife shows Maxwell used to spend his Saturdays, Sundays and holidays with his real wife in Portland, she coming to meet him at Newburyport.

On his return, Mrs. Moody would meet him at Biddeford, Me., she alleges. Thus he was not long without companionship of either his wife or alleged affinity, she states.

SHEET MUSIC LOST IN $7,500 BACK BAY FIRE

Damage estimated at $7,500 was caused by a fire which started in the elevator shaft of a five-story building at No. 42 Stanhope street, occupied by the Oliver Ditson Company. Police said the fire was due to defective wiring. The blaze was confined to the fourth and fifth floors of the building. Most of the damage was caused by the water which was poured on the music stock of the company by the automatic sprinkling system.

APP GIVEN TEN YEARS FOR ATTACK

William F. App of North Woburn, branded as "a menace to the safety of young girls," was sentenced to from ten to twelve years in State Prison by Judge Whiting in Middlesex Superior Court, East Cambridge, for an attack on Phoebe Dotten, the fourteen-year-old daughter of a Winchester selectman.

Mrs. App, wife of the defendant, and their four-year-old son looked on with tear-dimmed eyes as App was led from the court room en route to his prison cell. Mrs. App shook with emotion and was the object of pity of the crowd of spectators.

William F. App

App was found guilty of the charge by a jury last Tuesday. The attack occurred October 9, near the Dotten girl's home.

When App was brought to trial, he was out on bail on an indictment charging him with kidnaping and attacking seven-year-old Grace Drew of Melrose. With her clothing torn and in a pitiful condition, the little Drew girl was found at midnight on a rock in the Saugus woods on the edge of a pond.

FACES ANOTHER TRIAL.

When App is released after his present sentence has been served, he will immediately be re-arrested for the authorities of Essex County and placed on trial for his alleged attack of the Drew child in Saugus.

As App's case was called in the East Cambridge Court, Assistant District Attorney Bushnell arose. He demanded a long prison term for App. He bitterly denounced the defendant.

Mrs. Alice L. Mrs. Boardman also created a trust for the care of the grave of her son, who is buried at Kissengen, Bavaria.

$2,088 DEFICIT IN BOOKS OF TOWN CLERK

Last April the town of Easthampton voted to adopt the State system of auditing by the State Department of Corporations, which system is in vogue in many towns and cities in Massachusetts.

Then things began to happen!

An inspection of the town's books was begun. Oren C. Burt, who had been town clerk of Easthampton for nearly six years, resigned on May 23. The audit, completed by Chief Auditor E. H. Fenton, on August 18, has just been made public and shows a discrepancy of $2088.

According to Chief Auditor Fenton, the shortage covers a period of [illegible] and one-half years. Full restitution is said to have been made. No charges have been made against Burt.

The present town clerk is William A. Walker. The dates of the audit and of Burt's resignation were obtained from him.

WISE Washington correspondents tell you:

'In President Coolidge's message, the talk on foreign relations will end with an indorsement of the World Court idea—a feeble indorsement, but an indorsement."

In the evening, after he has read that paragraph, in the message, Hiram Johnson will tack on a new paragraph to his now-I-lay-me, as follows:

And bless Calvin Coolidge, who has given me my issue, just as I hoped.

YOUR Congress, sixty-eighth in the history of the United States, met yesterday and discovered that politics this year is a tangled web, woven of many "blocs."

It will be hard, even, to organize the House for business.

Stand pat conservatism—pained by the farm bloc [illegible] other blocs, denounces them as unpatriotic. The other respectable bloc, according to the Old Guard, is the original financial bloc, which once owned the Senate. That bloc is quite respectable. It contains the best elements, men that run railroads, looking at a ticker—men that never went to war, but hate the idea of a bonus—men that don't know a shoat from a Shogun, but can tell farmers all about farming, and how foolish it is to imagine that high freight rates injure farmers.

EIGHTEEN cases of whiskey and two corpses are washed up on the New Jersey shore.

Prohibition agents take charge of the whiskey. Undertakers take charge of the bodies. In the pocket of one dead man was a watch, still running.

Many, before prohibition days, used to write of whiskey's terrible crime record, and it was a record. How little they thought that prohibition would establish a bootlegging crime record that would make the record of "legitimate" whiskey seem childish.

JUDGE GARY, of the big steel company, is not a seventh son, but he can tell your fortune, if you are in business. Next year will be much better than this. Go ahead, "well within your resources." Buy what you need; you won't get it cheaper.

THIS IS a growing country, and business grows much faster than the population. In 1900 the population was 76,000,000. It has grown to 110,000,000 in 23 years, about 45 per cent., not bad.

But consider steel. In 1900 this country produced 10,000,000 tons in a year. Now it produces 40,000,000 tons, an increase of 300 per cent.

If you sell this country "short," you'll lose. And don't listen to any talk about "a bad Presidential year." Prepare for good times. In the words of the distinguished optimist, Mr. Uppercut, "expect great things."

POOR OLD TUTANKHAMEN must undergo the last humiliation. Those that found his tomb will unwrap the bandages that cover his withered body, several thousand feet of the most finely woven material. Then he will be wrapped up again, and put back to sleep. Sightseers may see him and reflect on life's uncertainties.

Rich Mother and Son Are Sued by Jilted Actress

MARY LYGO

International Newsreel Photo

"Follies" actress is suing Gordon C. Thorne for $100,000, charging breach of promise, and his mother, the rich widow of a Montgomery, Ward and Company official for a similar amount, charging alienations of her son's affections.

GIRL DEMANDS $100,000 FOR LOST LOVE

Chicago, Dec. 4.—A breach of promise suit against Gordon C. Thorne for $100,000 ad an alienation of the affections suit against his mother, Mrs. Katherine Thorne Camp, for a similar amount, both brought by Mary Lygo, "Follies" actress, were slated to go on trial today.

Gordon is the son of the late vice-president of the Montgomery, Ward & Co. The suits against him and his mother were brought by the "Follies" actress in 1922, after, it is alleged, he jilted her when his mother told him to choose between her and his sweetheart.

Miss Lygo has tried to die because of her love for Thorne. In 1921 she slashed her wrists in the Hotel Sherman at Chicago with a safety razor blade after she charged Thorne had spoken harshly to her. The second time, when Thorne left Chicago for Florida for the Winter, she tried to kill herself by taking veronal.

The young millionaire is fighting the suit on the claim that he never proposed marriage to the actress. He gave her up, he said, when her "actions" killed all his affection for her.

Thorne sped to Miami with his mother following her ultimatum that "if he marries that vampire, I'll disinherit him." From there he wired Miss Lygo that he was through with romance.

In filing her suits against the Thornes, the "Follies" actress charged that Thorne jilted her for his mother's money. She alleged that had it not been for the interference of Mrs. Thorne, the couple would have been happily married.

Since the filing of the suit, Thorne was quietly married to Miss Helen McGinnis at the home of his mother in Chicago. He was divorced from his first wife, Virginia Milner Thorne.

DEMOCRATIC LEADER INTERNALLY HURT

Worcester, Dec. 4.—Henry M. Shaughnessy of No. 50 Woodland street, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, is on the danger list at Newton Hospital with internal injuries and bruises as the result of an automobile accident in that city. He was unable to preside at the opening rally of the city campaign scheduled for this week.

$2,000 TRUST FUND LEFT FOR HORSE

New Haven, Dec. 4.—Under the will of General Henry S. Peck, filed today, the income of a trust fund of $2,000 is to be used to care for his favorite mount, Andy, during the remainder of its life. The horse may not be sold.

BAPTISTS FLAY FAUNCE AS FOE OF RELIGION

New York, Dec. 4.—Assailing the so-called "Modernist" movement in religion [illegible] its leaders, including Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick and President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University, the Baptist Fundamentalists today entered the third day of their series of anti-modernist meetings.

President Faunce

Standing firmly for an absolutely literal interpretation of the Bible, Dr. William Pettingill, dean of the Baptist Bible School in Philadelphia, and Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto, president of the Baptist Union of North America, branded the modernists as anti-Christian and enemies of the Christian religion.

Dr. Shields said that last week he had refused to attend services at McMasters University at Toronto when a new chancellor was installed because President Faunce was among those to receive honorary degrees. Dr. Shields is a member of the board of governors of the university.

He criticized Dr. Fosdick and Dr. Faunce, declaring that their influence could only bring about the development of conditions here such as obtain in Russia.

He said the fight between the fundamentalists and modernists was a real war and that fundamentalists should be prepared to be wounded and to die if necessary for their cause. He asserted families might be broken up, but that no fundamentalist should surrender to members of his family. Modernists, he said, are reactionaries rather than liberals.

WOMAN RECLUSE IS FOUND DEAD

Clara Wheelock, sixty-four years old, of oN. 16 Whitfield street, Dorchester, died of heart failure while sitting in a chair at her home and the body was not discovered until three or four days after death.

The woman, who lived alone, was found dead by Mrs. Margaret Flynn, a neighbor, when the latter became alarmed at her failure to appear. When the body was discovered a gas stove was found burning in the room. It is believed it had been burning for several days.

Daugherty's Report Calls Rum-Running "Most Gigantic Criminal Problem"

Washington, Dec. 4.—Rum-running off the American coast is the chief obstacle in the government's efforts to enforce the prohibition law, Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty declared today in his annual report to Congress.

The liquor smuggling business is the "most gigantic criminal problem the United States has ever faced on the high seas," the report said.

Some idea of the gravity of liquor smuggling was cited in official estimates taken at Nassau, Bahamas, and Glasgow, Scotland. Shipments from Nassau for the year 1922 nd part of 1923 were estimated at an approximate value of $7,059,294. Whiskey consignments from Glasgow for American consumption for the same period were estimated at approximately 150,000 gallons.

MORE CUTTERS NEEDED.

To more efficiently combat this evil the report urged the strengthening of the coast guard service.

The coast guard is the only force having equipment to deal with smuggling o nthe hihg seas, and observation is convincing that "its equipment is not sufficient to suppress it along our long Atlantic and Pacific coast lines," Daugherty said.

Congestion of court dockets also hampers work of tightening the dry lid, the report pointed out.

Daugherty urged unification by federal courts of sentences for dry act violators, and the imposition of increasingly substantial sentences to check bootlegging.

DRIVE AGAINST TRUSTS.

Discussing the activities of the department in prosecuting violation of the anti-trust laws, the reports said that "while it is the purpose of the Department of Justice not to interfere necessarily with private business," the federal laws must be enforced against whoever may attempt to interpose articial restraints in any channel of interstate commerce.

"The channels of trade must be kept free from manipulation and arbitrary control, and individuals and the general public must be protected from the illegal practices to which the business of the country is from time to time subjected."

PRIMARY BATTLE ON IN SO. DAKOTA

Pierre, South Dakota, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—First selections for the 1924 presidential primaries will be made today by the State proposal conventions of the Democratic, Republican and Farmer-Labor parties. In the Democratic convention the supporters of William G. McAdoo will fight the campaign in behalf of Henry Ford, while in the Republican gathering Hiram Johnson and President Coolidge will face their test. The Farmer-Labor assemblage will choose between Henry Ford and Lafollette.

MEXICAN SENATE TO GET U. S. PACT

Celaya, Mexico, Dec. 4 (Universal Cable).—President Obregon has announced that on Thursday of this week he will present the claims convention agreed upon by the United States-Mexican commissioners at the Pre-Recognition Conference, to the Mexican Senate for approval.

The sessions of the Senate while considering the agreement will be secret. The agreement will not be made public until both the United States Senate and the Mexican Senate approve it.

'Rose of the Cabarets,' Too Hard to Care, Typical of Hundreds

This is the second of a series of stories written by the policewomen of Boston for the Boston American on vital problems faced daily by thousands of anxious mothers and equally anxious fathers and husbands. Just a peep behind the scenes of a metropolitan police department.

By IRENE McAULIFFE

Member of Boston's police department, and formerly on police department of Washington, D. C.

Today I want to tell you the story of Rose, the girl who was too hard to care.

The story of Rose fits the cases of hundreds of other girls in Boston and the other towns and cities throughout New England. It is true—too true.

Rose was only seventeen years old.

She was the only child of a hard-working mother. Her worthless father was without decency or self-respect or concern for the welfare of his wife and daughter.

If I believed in the theory of inheritance of vicious characteristics I would point to Rose as an example. She has an odd paradoxical temperament. She is indolent, slovenly and calloused to all ordinary emotional appeal. Yet she is a brilliant thinker, a sharp wit and, strangest of all, has cultivated a taste for good books, pictures and the aesthetic in life.

Rose started early in life making trouble for herself and her overworked mother. She started as so many girls do, by running away.

The police were called in and she was found living with a woman of questionable character in a $150 a month apartment in a fashionable section of Boston. She was returned to her home laden with cast-off finery of her "benefactress."

I talked with Rose. I asked her why she ran away, why she did not go out and get a decent job and try to help her poor old mother.

"What chance have I working?" she retorted. "Eighteen a week! What's the good of that? Why, say, Miss McAuliffe, you know perfectly well that a girl can't get a pair of decent stockings for less than $4. And I run through at least two pairs a week.

"Where am I going to get a fur coat this Winter? There is no Santa Claus going to come and push one into my stocking on Christmas Eve."

FOUND IN CABARET.

"Thousands of girls get along without fur coats in Boston," I told her, feeling a bit helpless about it.

There was an ugly sneer on Rose's face.

"Well, listen, Miss McAuliffe, those girlies are all right in their way. But I'm not one of them. So long as there are fur coats in the world I am going to have one of them, see."

"But good girls—" I started to say.

"Good girls—my eyes," snapped Rose as she gave me a glance almost of pity. "Say don't be a fool. Good girls! You don't mean good girls. You mean dumb girls, mutton heads, little simps."

Rose finally saw the light, temporarily and went back home. She went back to high school and finished her course, graduating with honors. Then she immediately went back to her old method of life and ran away.

We found Rose singing in a cabaret. She said she was still a "good" girl. And somehow or other I was inclined to believe her. But she was hardening. I tried to talk with her as I had before, but she would have none of it.

"I want pretty clothes and I want diamonds," she said. "I'm better looking than most of those girls you see tramping up and down Tremont and Boylston streets with their charge accounts at the big stores. They should worry, those girls. Their fathers have got the money. What do they care? And I bet you I am morally better than a lot of them with all their jewels and their finery. And I am going to have my share before I quit."

Despite the fact that Rose had grown harder I felt certain that she was doing her best to be truthful while bringing me around to her point of view.

"Look here, McAuliffe," she said. She was not so respectful as before. "I am working here and drawing down forty bucks a week for honest toil. I am earning my money. Nothing is being handed to me. Get that thought out of your dome once and for all.

"Go home and tell my mother that when I get ready to be a fool I'll get my price."

FINALLY VANISHES.

Rose went back, however, but she ran away again. I don't know where she is today. She has been swallowed up in the whirlpool that was destined to get her sooner or later.

"I wish you could find my little girl," said her mother, the last time I saw her.

But I know we will never find Rose again. She isn't a little girl. She is a thousand years older than her mother. Indeed, she is years older than I.

Rose will never come back.

(Another installment of Irene McAuliffe's story will appear in the Boston American tomorrow. Mothers, fathers, husbands—all who are interested in the girl problem—should not miss it.)

DIAMONDS ARE LINKED CLOSER TO MURDERS

New York, Dec. 4.—Testimony that is expected to link Morris Barlow Diamond and his brother, Joseph, closer to the actual shooting of the two messengers from the West End Bank in Brooklyn, November 14, was presented today by District Attorney Dodd to the Grand Jury.

It is predicted five men will be indicted.

Although most of the details of the murders are known to the investigators, and the part each member of the "crime syndicate" played in carrying them out is known to District Attorney Dodd, a hole-proof" indictment must be obtained from the testimony of others than the principles in the conspiracy.

Possession of $9,000 of the stolen $43,000 is expected to implicate Barlow Diamond. Witnesses will testify he was seen at the scene of the crime.

THINK GIRL STOLEN BY MORON

Police Hunt Self-Styled "Celestial Angel and Heavenly Father," Who Fled Asylum

Chicago, Dec. 4.—After more than thirty-six hours' search, the police have decided that welve-year-old Rose Borh, who disappeared Sunday afer she had been sent for groceries, has been kidnaped by a moron.

The police say they are seeking a self-styled "Celestial angel and heavenly father" as the possible kidnaper. They say he is described in criminal records as a moron and maniac.

He is said to have escaped recently from a State hospital for the insane at Elgin, where he was sent after conviction for attacking children in his religious cult under guise of performing a religious ceremony.

Search for the man was begun when the police noticed the similarity of his methods and the conditions surrounding Rose's disappearance.

"I'm going to be confirmed to-night," Rose is said to have told the grocer in her last recorded statement. None of her family or friends except her seven-year-old brother knew of any planned confirmation.

"A man asked her a few days ago if she wanted to be confirmed," the child said.

The abduction theory was strengthened when two other girls told the police they had been approached by a man answering the description of the alleged kidnaper of Rose.

WALTON SUPPORTER QUITS UNDER FIRE

Oklahoma, City, Okla., Dec. 4.—Murray F. Gibbons, State Representative from McLain County and Speaker of the last session of the Legislature, resigned through counsel, when his explusion case was called up in the House.

Gibbons was charged with attempting to block the election of October 2, with commercializing his official position by obtaining a parole for Ira Williams, serving a sentence on a statutory charge, and with padding House Committee payrolls.

Gibbons was a supporter of former Governor J. C. Walton.

BEACHMONT BOY RUN OVER BY AUTO

Gerald Lewin, fifteen years old, of No. 170 Winthrop avenue, Beachmont, is at the Massachusetts General Hospital, with his name on the danger list, as the result of being struck and run over by an automobile owned and operated by Rosvio Reltino, of No. 125 Oak Island street, Revere.

TRAITS OF BABY ARE REVEALED AT CLINICS

Can you psychoanalyze a baby? When? Where? How?

There's dispute among the learned.

They all agree it can be done. Most of them agree it can be done from the time a baby is three months old.

Dr. Ransom F. Carver is with the "Nays."

"The children are too nervous and too frightened at the baby clinics for a fair test to be made," he says.

But Professor Harrison L. Harley, Phd., claims a baby clinic is the best place in the world to judge the "personality development" of a child.

PERSONALITY TRAITS SHOWN.

"Clinics bring to the fore the child's nervous traits. From the standpoint of psychology that is a great advantage," he says. The personality traits show up under these conditions, Our social life affects our personality rather than our intellectual life.

"No one is able to judge Robinson Crusoe's personality. He lived a solitary existence. It is our social life that our weaknesses, strengths, powers, failings, come out. So it is with the children. Maybe we cannot judge their intellectual development under these conditions, but it is the best possible place for giving them a personality test.

"If in a series of tests at regular intervals the child shows the same irritability, let's say. It is certainly a characteristic of the child."

Prof. Harley has psychoanlyzed not less than 6,000 babies.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

The attendance at the baby clinic in the Municipal Building, South End, Monday, was so large that although fifty were admitted, there were fifty more who were turned away.

WEALTHY BROCKTON REALTY MAN DEAD

Brockton, Dec. 4.—Bradford E. Jones, one of the wealthiest real estate holders in Brockton, is dead at his home, No. 220 North Main street, aged 83 years. He was for many years the leading dry goods merchant in Brockton. Stephen Rosseter Jones of Boston, a member of the law firm of Blodgett, Jones & Burnham, is a son. A daughter, Miss Katherine Paine Jones, also survives.

FORD WILL MAKE NITRATE BID, HE TELLS COOLIDGE

Washington, Dec. 4 (Universal Service).—Henry Ford, automobile magnate, in conference with President Coolidge, reached an agreement to renew negotiations to purchase the Muscle Shoals power project.

Henry Ford

He will guarantee to manufacture nitrates for fertilizer in peace and equip the plant so that it may immediately be transformed into a war industry to produce the same element for the manufacture of explosives.

It was indicated that the President and the manufacturer are so nearly in accord on the general proposal that the big plant may pass into the hands of Mr. Ford within a few months. The one point remaining to be settled is that of a steam plant, to be operated two meons in the year when the water power is insufficient. The plant originally intended for this, known as the Gorgas plant, was sold to the Alabama Power Company over the protest of Ford.

Ford is said now to have agreed to accept a reduction in his bid for the amount paid for the Gorgas plant. The plant was located ninety miles from the water power project, at a point convenient for the shipment of coal. Mr. Ford is to decide whether it will be an economy to luplicate the Gorgas plant or pay the freight on coal to the water power site.

Journalism was recognized, in a condescending way, as the "fourth estate."

John Galsworthy, writing for the London Times about fair play in international thought, says that the three estates now ruling mankind are science, finance and the press.

OF THE THREE, science is incomparably greatest, Newspapers come next; finance, third. Newspapers can overrule all the power of finance, if the newspapers happen to be in the right. Newspapers and finance combined can do nothing against science, except postpone its benefits.

LLOYD GEORGE says England will go for free trade, by a million votes, and Lloyd George knows more nearly than anybody else what the English people will do. If they have protection in England, they will have it carefully studied out for the bulk of the English people, not for the enriching of clever individuals able to pull legislative strings.

The English really have achieved a certain degree of government by the people, for the people. We shall do it here some day.

THE VILLAGE of Asouna, in Japan, has a fire company made up entirely of women. That is something new, but being organized to save life, rather than property, it does not surprise you.

A woman, you may be sure, was the first to enter a burning structure to carry out a child.

A man, very probably, was first to run that risk, to save property.

THE POSTAL deficit is cut thirty millions. And if the Postoffice charged the people one quarter as much as a private corporation would charge, Postoffice profits would amount to hundreds of millions. Bear that in mind when you discuss public ownership.

SLAYER WANTS BODY SOLD TO REIMBURSE HIS FRIENDS

Houston, Tex., Dec. 4 (Universal).—Declaring that he did not care what [illegible] of his body, except that he hoped it would bring $96 with which to pay friends he owed, George Vexenot, French World War hero, has entered plea of guilty to the charge of murdering his one time sweetheart, Miss Louise Floquet.

Vexenot declares he knows no fear and welcomes the opportunity to pay with his life for his crime.

The Frenchman had been the sweetheart of Miss Eloquet until about two months ago, he declared. They quarreled, and he killed her. When placed under arrest he asked that he be immediately executed.

When arraigned Vexenot told the court he hoped he would be executed and his body sold to pay friends $96—saying hep resumed it would bring that much.

31 HAVERHILL SHOE SHOPS TO JOIN LOCKOUT

Haverhill, Dec. 4.—Thirty-one of the thirty-three shoe manufacturing firms of this city plan closing in a big lock-out unless their terms of peace with the union are accepted. This became known today through a statement issued by Joseph C. Kimball, president of the Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' Association. After reviewing negotiations for a five-year peace pact, it stated:

"It is now up to members of the locals to say whether they will work or not."

Manufacturers delivered terms of this proposed pact as their only stand. The statement through President Kimball relating to it was given out on the eve of a series of mass meetings of the ten locals which end tomorrow night. These meetings will consider the proposed terms of the manufacturers.

Cod Fish Cakes

Mrs. Busy Wife:

LET us introduce you to a real friend—a delicious meal that takes but a few minutes to prepare. Nothing to do but fry! Made from the famous Gorton's Cod Fish—No Bones. The original ready-to-fry fish cakes.

This is the loaf I bake for you tomorrow!

IT'S my special mid-week treat—the finest I can offer you.

Every slice of this perfect bread is filled and flavored with plump and juicy Sun-Maid Raisins. It is rich and fruity—healthful as well as delicious. And so much goodness, so much nourishment at such low cost!

Also "special for Wednesday"

For all those women who have formed a happy little custom of serving Raisin Foods on Wednesday, I will include other tempting Sun-Maid Raisin Foods in my special baking for tomorrow.

Rolls, cookies, cakes, coffee cakes, muffins, raisin pies, "snails," and others will come to you fresh and fragrant from my ovens.

By bakers everywhere

The finest Sun-Maid Raisin Bread and other Raisin Foods are prepared "special for Wednesday" by bakers every week—everywhere.

You can get them at bakeries, grocery stores and delicatessens throughout the city.

UNCANNY FATE VISITS FAMILY OF FILM STAR

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 4 (Universal Service).—What is the almost uncanny fate which seems pursuing the Sedgwick family, of motion picture fame?

Edgar Sedgwick, the director, is confined to his home from a baffling case of what has been pronounced blood poisoning. He has been ill for over a month.

Last week, his sister Josie, a leading woman, was stricken with the same malady apparently, and today another sister, Eileen, noted beauty of the screen, was seriously burned while appearing in the filming of a fire scene at Universal City.

The actress' right arm was terribly burned to the shoulder, her face was severely burned, as well as her back and shoulders, and in addition fully half her well known blonde locks were completely burned off.

The player was given first-aid treatment at the film studios hospital, then removed to her home, where she is now under the care of physicians.

"Bill" Desmond, well known character actor, also appearing in the scene with Miss Sedgwick, was burned but not seriously.

It is stated that but for the timely rescue of Miss Sedgwick by "Artie" Artego, a cowboy, also in the picture, she would probably have lost her life.

MAYOR RAPS PASTOR FOR LIQUOR SERMON

Marlboro, Dec. 4.—Mayor Edward T. Simoneau, who was the object of severe criticism in a sermon by the Rev. Paul Harris Drake of the Universalist Church on "Hell, Home Brew and Halleluja," during which he produced a pint of liquor alleged to have been bought in Marlboro, retaliated by attacking the minister in a campaign speech.

Mayor Simoneau is a candidate for re-election at the Tuesday election and is opposed by Ex-Representative James M. Hurley. The Mayor declared he regarded the minister's sermon as an eleventh hour attack on his character for the benefit of his opponent in the mayoralty race.

TWO ARRESTED IN BROCKTON STABBING

Fall River, Dec. 4.—Antone R. Cabral, No. 76 Pitman street, is at St. Anne's Hospital suffering from a wound in his abdomen and is in a serious condition, as the result of a stabbing affray which created excitement in the Portuguese colony.

A second man, Manuel T. Caritos, No. 76 Boutwell street, narrowly escaped being wounded during the fight. Louis Bondi is under arrest charged with stabbing Cabral and attempting to stab Caritos. Thomas LaGasse is also under arrest charged with assault and battery.

MAN DROPS DEAD ON HARVARD SQUARE CAR

Edward A. Lynch of No. 15 Boston place, South Boston, father of Dr. James Lynch of No. 852 Dorchester avenue, South Boston, dropped dead in Harvard square.

Lynch was riding on a Boston-bound elevated car when stricken and apparently felt ill while riding. He alighted just below Harvard square and collapsed on the sidewalk. He was removed to the Cambridge City Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

SON OF TRAFFIC OFFICER INJURED

Allen Barber, 10 years old, son of Frank B. Barber, a traffic officer attached to the Medford police, was struck and seriously injured by an automobile while crossing Cntral avenue, near Evans street, Medford. He was taken to the Malden Hospital by James J. Brennan of No. 83 Wicklow street, Medford, operator of the automobile which struck the lad.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

800 MORE HANDS BACK AT AMOSKEAG

Manchester, N. H., Dec. 4.—More departments in the Amoskeag Mills were reopened after several weeks' shutdown. More than 800 operatives went to work for the first time, bringing up the total to more than 10,000 mill operatives. Part of the mills are working three days, others four and still others the full week.

3 MEN KILLED IN AUTOS IN BAY STATE

The deaths of three men were added within a few hours to the steadily mounting toll of lives from motor accidents in Massachusetts.

John J. McCarthy, sixty years old, a widower of No. 279 Church street, Newton, died in the Newton Hospital from injuries received when the motor truck he was driving for the city of Newton was struck by a car on the lines of the Boston & Worcester street railway at Circuit avenue and Boylston street, Newton Upper Falls.

McCarthy was removed to the hospital in a police ambulance. He died a few hours later from a fractured skull and internal injuries.

At Springfield George Quinn, 36, of New York City, and John A. McIntyre, 29, of Detroit, Mich., agents for the New Zealand Insurance Co. of New York, were killed when the roadster in which they were traveling at the rate of 50 miles an hour skidded on Boston road and plunged down an embankment.

Quinn, driver of the machine, attempted to pass three other vehicles on the road and in doing so met another auto coming in the opposite direction.

At that point, known as the Dead Man's Pines, is a bend in the road, and in trying to round it the machine skidded and rolled over three times.

Autoists who went to the assistance of the men found both pinioned under the engine of the machine.

2, MISTAKEN FOR DEER, WOUNDED

Royalston, Dec. 4.—Two Fitchburg men, mistaken for deer by a Gardner youth, were shot and seriously wounded in the first accident of the deer hunting season in Massachusetts. T. H. Caldon, eighteen years old, shot Hiram Kingston and Henry Drinkwine, who were hunting with three other Fitchburg men. Bullets from Caldon's shotgun opened large holes in the legs of the Fitchburg hunters. They were carried to Gardner for medical treatment.

ASKS 11 MILLION OF FORD FOR MAGNETO

New Orleans, Dec. 4.—The fly-wheel magneto, a device known wherever the products of Henry Ford are used, is the basis of a damage suit for $11,000,00, a ramification of which is to be heard in the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals here today.

The suit was brought by Edward S. Huff, formerly an engineer of the Ford Motor Company, but now a resident of Miami.

Huff claims to have invented the magneto while in the employ of the Ford Motor Company, and asserts he was to have received a royity of $2.50 for each one used. When he filed his suit in the Federal Court at Miami last year he calculated he was due $11,000,000.

The Ford defence is tht the inventor was paid $10,000 as a reawrd for developing the contrivance and tht there ws no greement specimy ing royalty.

CLINTON VETS AROUSED BY BUREAU ACT

Clinton, Dec 4.—Charging injustice has been done two of its members, Bernard Rash and Joseph J. Prendergast, who have been notified their compensation has been discontinued on the alleged ground they cannot show 10 per cent. disability, the local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has called a mass meeting for Sunday afternoon.

Rash, formerly a member of K Company, 101st Infantry, lost his right leg in France. Prendergast also served overseas. He was wounded in the head and carries a silver plate. He also was wounded in the leg and arm. Rash is learning the vulcanizing trade at a local tire shop, and Prendergast is learning the electrical business. They say they have not progressed sufficiently at their respective trades to be self-supporting.

Rash and Prendergast have received no compensation for two months. They were receiving $25 monthly each. The information this was stopped came from a training officer of the Veterans' Bureau.

Richardson Twins to Be Much Feted by Society, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

SOME twins are a terrific disappointment.

They don't look alike, talk alike or dress alike, and they might as well be prefect strangers.

But Phyllis and Suzanne Richardson are "bona-fide" twins. They are as bewildering a pair as one could hope to find in many moons, and they make the well-known peas in a pod look about as much alike as black and white.

They are the daughters of Philip Richardson, and they're both debutantes of this season. It was only recently that they returned to these shores after spending several years studying abroad.

Everyone seems to agree that they're a very interesting pair—and that not merely because they're twins. It's safe to say that they will be among the most hectically-feted buds of the season, their aunt, Mrs. Frederick L. W. Richardson, planning several functions in their honor. Mrs. Richardson's own daughter, Margery, made her debut last Winter, and was one of the prettiest girls of the season. She has dark hair, gray-blue eyes, and very lovely coloring.

Phyllis and Suzanne are tall and well-set up girls, having rather light brown hair and dark eyes.

Loraine Lesson

SPEAKING of the Richardson twins—they were of the gay throng attending the presentation ball held in honor of Miss Loraine Leeson at the Somerset the other evening.

As all good twins should, they were dressed alike in gowns of geranium pink velvet. I imagined that about the only way their partners could tell them apart was that one twin wore her serpent's bracelet circling her right arm, the other wearing her's on the left.

Miss Leeson, the bud for whom the ball was given, was a very attractive and girlish-looking figure. She is tall and slender, and the simply-made gown of shimmering silver and pale rose was very becoming to her blonde coloring.

Titian-haired Louisa Page, a deb of last season, was gowned, as usual, in green. Miss Ellen Lovering, a brunette, wore red velvet and looked good in it.

Louisa Page

Of those in white was Miss Grace Sargent, an attractive bud of last season, her frock of satin and lace. Miss "Polly" Webster wore rather a striking gown of orange satin, with marabout of a deeper shade for trimming.

Mrs. Alfred F. Dix of New York, who gave the ball in honor of her granddaughter, was gowned in black, while the bud's mother, Mrs. Robert G. Leeson of Commonwealth avenue, wore softly-draped velvet of a rich blue shade.

MRS. EDWIN S. WEBSTER

Mrs. Webster of Dartmouth street will be in the receiving line at the military ball taking place on Friday evening at the Copley-Plaza.

JUST now some of Boston's lucky buds are in Baltimore, going down to that city to attend the first of the famous bachelors' cotillons held last night at the Lyric Theatre. Among the latter are the Misses Frances Dewart and Elizabeth Stewart.

GIFT OF PLAYGROUND TO WASHINGTON

Washington, Dec. 4.—The capital's system of natural parks already acknowledged as one of the most beautiful in the country, was further enriched today by a gift of 78 acres from Charles C. Glover of the Riggs National Bank. The property lies near the American University grounds and was given for a parkway and children's playground.

LEBOWITZ LAST ON BALLOT, BUT NOT DOWNCAST

"My name is on the bottom of the ticket, but I hope that on election night it will be on top as the votes are counted."

Louis Lebowitz

This is how Louis Lebowitz, former Boston newsboy looks upon his candidacy for membership in the Boston City Council. When the six names of the candidates were drawn for position on the ballot, Louis Lebowitz's name was the last drawn out of the hat. That does not worry him in the least. For years he has been accustomed to fighting against odds. And he has always won out.

Louis is the eldest of eleven children. That did not prevent him from joining the army during the war. He received his education at the Wendell Phillips Grammar School, English High School and Boston University Law School. When he was attending high school he contributed to the support of his mother and brothers and sisters by driving a bakery wagon from midnight to eight in the morning. Later he was a milk wagon driver. Now he conducts an extensive news agency in Roxbury and South Boston. He has the endorsement of the Democratic Ward and City Committee.

DIVER BATTLES HUGE OCTOPUS IN FRENCH WARSHIP WRECK

Toulon, France, Dec. 4.—A diver working on the submerged wreck of the French battleship Liberte was attacked by a huge octopus which did not relinquish its manifold embrace until the man's comrades had cut it to pieces.

The diver, Jean Negri, fought desperately with the monster under water for some time. He was finally able to free one arm and plunged his trident into the body of the creature. The octopus, however, held fast, whereupon Negri gave the signal to be hauled up. When his companions saw the writhing monster emerge they were panicstricken, but the plight of their comrade appeared so serious that they went to his aid and freed him with their knives.

'INNOCENT MAN' 14 YRS. IN JAIL FOR MURDER

Hartford, Ct., Dec. 4.—"Mitchell, I did you a terrible wrong."

The words were from an aged juror, F. H. Smith, who, with eleven other men, declared Joe Mitchell murdered Joe Kuivinskas.

For that wrong, Mitchell has served fourteen years of a life sentence.

Prison officials admit that Smith visited Mitchell and told him that he and the other jurors have learned of falsification of evidence in the trial. Five others of the jury are living, and with Smith have signed a petition for a full pardon for the lifer and swearing to the falsification.

Mitchell will probably be released. He is forty-two years old now. During his fourteen years of confinement he has protested his innocence, but those with whom he came in contact had only repeated the old reply: "That's what they all say—there isn't a guilty man in prison."

MORE MONEY IS NEEDED FOR BASKET FUND

More money is needed by the American's Helping Hand Christmas Basket Fund if the needy families that have already applied for food are to be fed on Christmas Day.

Never since the fund was established ten years ago have so many letters asking for assistance been received as early as this year. The Christmas Fund director has been swamped with appeals for food. In one mail alone, he received seventy-one letters from all parts of Greater Boston appealing for food.

ONLY NEEDY SUPPLIED.

These letters were turned over to capable Christmas Fund workers for careful inquiry into each one, in order that only needy families shall be assisted.

Persons in a position to buy their own Christmas dinner need not expect a parcel of food from the Christmas Fund, as every possible effort to safeguard the contributions will be made.

The careful manner in which the Christmas Fund director seeks to place the food properly, is a feature that commends this great charity to many contributors.

SEND YOUR CONTRIBUTIONS.

Unless contributions come in much faster, however, thousands of persons in Greater Boston will go hungry on Christmas Day. The American will endeavor to feed as many unfortunates as possible. The only limit will be the amount of money received.

One of the largest radio concerts ever staged in New England will be conducted next Thursday evening, in aid of the Fund by Miss Helen M. Roche of South Boston, who has aided the Fund for several years, in many ways.

The concert will be broadcasted from the Shepard Stores, (WNAC) beginning at 9 p. m. Miss Roche, who is widely known on the concert stage, and who, until recently, was organist of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, has conducted many raido concerts from all the broadcasting stations in Greater Boston. She promises a big treat on Thursday evening. She hopes many of the radio enthusiasts who enjoy the concert will show their appreciation by sending donations to the American's Christmas Fund.

NOTABLE PROGRAM.

Among those who will appear on Thursday evening's program are Dr. William F. Reilly, 'cellist; his daughter, Katherine E. Reilly, violinist, and Miss Roche, pianist, who form the Shubert Trio; Miss Eileen V. Driscoll, mezzo-soprano, of Dedham, one of Boston's best known public school teachers, in a group of Scotch songs.

The other artists include Helena M. DeYone, soprano, of Dorchester; Benjamin Feltch, baritone, and Edward H. Sullivan, tenor. St. Mark's Choral Club of Dorchester, of which Bertha L. Sullivan is organist and director, will be heard in oratorio.

TENOR SOLOIST.

Others who will appear are John Riley, tenor; Alice McGurn Maloney, Edward H. Sullivan, Arthur Reardon, Edward Finnerty, soloists; Mary Russell, John Fleming, Marion Caddigan, Chester and Doris Hooper, Agnes Fanning, Richard and Edward McCauley, Mildred and Marion Donovan, Thomas F. Brady and William E. O'Brien.

The Hub orchestra will also appear on the program with Donald Hay, director, and C. Donners, manager, E. Smith, D. Hay, B. Wolfe, E. Robinson, J. Jennings, L. Muller, G. Muller and T. Durand.

Miss Roche has an album containing hundreds of letters of appreciation which she has received from radio fans throughout the East who have "listened in" on programs directed by her. Several of these letters have come to her through Miss Jean Sargent, popular secretary of Major John J. Fanning, the widely known WNAC broadcast director.

ANOTHER BENEFIT.

Among the talented persons who will take part in the entertainment and dance of the Taylor School of Stage Arts, in Huntington Chambers Hall, No. 30 Huntington avenue, December 10, in behalf of the Fund are: Miss Elizabeth Clark, Miss May Warde, Miss Irene Giard, Miss Martha Puchian, Rene LaMont, Olive Towle, Frederic Muller, Eloise Blair, Alice Biggane, May D. Beal and Alice Balbinie.

"Lady in Ermine" Adds Snug Sum to Basket Fund

In a theatrical season which, so far, has brought to Boston so many musical comedies that are only fair and so very few that can be classed as really good, "The Lady in Ermine," which opened to a crowded house at the Wilbur Theatre last night, is something in the nature of a drink of water to a thirsty man. To say the least it is refreshing.

Nearly a score of musical numbers with a like number of dances together with an interesting plot, exceptionally well acted, combine to make "The Lady in Ermine" an attraction that will be remembered for a long time.

Four outstanding players head the cast. They are Nancy Gibbs, Zella Russell, Harry K. Morton and Walter Woolf.

Miss Gibbs, in her opening number, has the audience in the hollow of her hand and she keeps it there all through the performance. Miss Russell is as popular as ever and some excellent dance numbers are supplied by Isabelle Rodriguez.

Last night's performance was broadcasted through the courtesy of the Shepard Stores. The Shuberts contributed 10 per cent. of the proceeds to the American's Christmas Basket Fund while a bevy of pretty girls, chaperoned by Mrs. Anna G. Killion, received the Christmas fund offerings of a generous audience.

The young ladies who assisted were: Anna Creedon, Grace Moulton, Margaret Cochrane, Peggy Player, Constance Silver, Dorothy Windheim, Claire Creed, Ella Levine, Hazel Daley, May Slavin, Margaret McEachern, Alice Sperillo, Julia Fitzgerald, Frances Frazier, Miss Mahoney, Marcella Hanahan, Lulu MacFarlane, Hilda Clason, May Morton, Blanche Butler, Josephine O'Neill, Lydia Miller and Dorothy Mahoney.

The largest motor truck fleets in the country are Whites. Many of them start with a single White Truck in a mixed fleet. Gradually, but certainly, the weaker trucks run their brief span of life. The original White keeps at its task each day and repeat orders follow. The Roll Call of White owners shows 593 fleets of 10 or more totaling 21,773 trucks. Only unusual performance in all industries could build this unparalleled record.

'BIRTH CONTROL' PASTOR OPENS SPOONERS' SPACE IN CHURCH

FIRST AID TO CUPID HIS PLAN

Rev. Mr. West of Milford Seeks a Solution of Divorce Evil

By WALTER B. FORD

Milford, Dec. 4.—Birth control and babies as well as Bible interpretations are becoming questions of creed in the Pine Street Baptist Church of Milford. The Rev. Louis Winthrop West, pastor of the church, who has turned the vestry into a workshop for Cupid on Sunday afternoons, believes in birth control.

Therefore he was not surprised when every woman of his church to whom he submitted a questionnaire "For Married Women," came out for birth control in their replies. These replies were read in church at Sunday night's service and created a sensation. They also packed the church.

But the Rev. Mr. West believes in birth control to the extent that no parent should bring into the world more children than they can rear properly.

The women who answered his questionnaire also stated that as their basis for belief.

MR. WEST'S VIEWS.

Now listen to the Rev. Mr. West in an exclusive interview with an American reporter:

"Too many of our church practice birth control, not only to the extent of having as many children as they can successfully rear, but much farther than that.

"I was not greatly surprised at the women to whom I submitted questionnaires replying as they did. Three of them are mothers, and in four families there are but seven children. And they were representative women of my congregation.

"Folks should exercise any means within the law which would prevent their bringing into the world more children than they could properly care for or rear as good American citizens.

"As to the accomplishing of this I will leave that to each individual as to what that method might be."

HAS FIVE CHILDREN.

The Rev. Mr. West is thirty-eight years of age. He was married fourteen years ago to Miss Blanche Burrill of Hudson. They are the parents of five children, ranging from three years to thirteen.

He will not divulge what his salary is as a basis for his belief.

The Rev. Mr. West not only believes in properly balanced families after marriage, but he is determined both to find out what is causing all the divorces, why marriages are unhappy and what is the cure.

Going back still farther, he is endeavoring to start off younger members of his church towards the matrimonial guideposts with a little first aid to Cupid.

To that end he has put his church vestry at the disposal of courting couples whose homes are cluttered up with anything from parents and small brothers to talking machines.

So he advertised the fact—he asserts that it is newspaper advertising which has packed his church Sunday nights as much as his originality—and awaited results.

Sunday afternoon the couples began straying in. They could hardly believe it at first. There was an orchestra. There were loose chairs which could be arranged in pairs. True there were a chaperone and a deacon, but they were well behaved.

SHY AT FIRST.

A bit shy at first, the young people were inclined to bunch up, the match-making preacher admits, but things were going well before the three hours from 2 to 5 were up.

While the orchestra played classical as well as religious music, jazz was barred. It will continue to be barred. The Rev. Mr. West, with all his liberal ideas, cannot just see that jazz is good for young people.

Tea was provided and sandwiches and other light edibles were provided. A pleasant time was enjoyed by all and the church sexton is mixing up paint to letter a nice, big S. R. O. sign to be hung up within a Sunday or two.

Cupid's kitchen, where the broth of romance is brewed, may be a church innovation but it is headed for a long run in Milford if the youths and maidens are allowed to speak up.

The chaperone on opening day was Mrs. Lilla Gilman. Deacon W. Watkins and Joseph Robson represented the church body. Different chaperones and deacons are to officiate each Sunday.

YOUNG FOLK QUIZZED.

Questionnaires for married women are not the only ones. The Rev. Mr. West has already put out sets of questionnaires to boys and young men and girls of high school age. He is planning to launch them at the married men next Sunday and the last ones will be handed to all divorced people in his church.

"From all these I propose to evolve a solution, and on that I will preach a series of sermons," he told an American reporter.

""I have wondered why there were so many unhappy unions ending in divorces." I am trying to find out," the preacher said. "Five years ago in a litle church at Waldoboro, Me., I partly tried out the plan of interviews with young people. Now I am going through with it thoroughly."

MANY MARRIAGES HASTY.

"As to young people, I have an idea that one great trouble with marriages is that they are too hasty—ill-mated—not understanding each other. The girls fear they will become an 'old maid like so-and-so' and the boys marry from infatuation. The sex influence also enters in this age of more or less freedom of relations.

"I expect the replies of the divorced to form the keynote of my solution."

His questionaires to girls included those from sixteen to twenty-two. Besides school girls they included one teacher, one girl worker in a bank and one telephone operator. Those to boys included ages from sixteen to twenty.

Replies made names known to the pastor in sworn confidence. All have been read at evening services without names.

"It was successful beyond my hopes," said the pastor. "The answers were frank to a degree. But little levity crept in. The girls had little to complain of in the boys, as to their faults. The boys blamed the girls of the present age not so much as the jazz age. Their chief fault was that girls tried to imitate screen stars instead of mothers.

The Rev. Mr. West expresses his belief that in Milford a young couple can safely marry and start a home on $25 a week.

Rev. Mr. West came to Milford last February. He was born at Islesboro, Me., and has been preaching fourteen years, all the time in that State. He received part of his theological education in Boston, at Gordon College of Theology and Missions, then the Gordon Bible School. He was graduated from Colby and attended Bangor Theological Seminary.

Above is where Milford clergyman puts into effect his plan for having youthful parishioners spoon to their hearts' content, but always under the watchful eyes of a discreet chaperone.

Mr. West says that he believes in the theory of birth control, but only to the extent that the families should be limited to ability of the parents to rear the children properly.

SOLD PROPERTY, QUIT WIFE, POLICE CHARGE

Fitchburg, Dec. 4.—Anthony Baden, thirty-eight, formerly of No. 62 Cascade street, pleaded not guilty to a charge of desertion preferred against him by his wife in the District Court. Baden, according to the police, had a prosperous store on Cascade street. He also owned a house, but shortly before October 3, unknown to his wife, he disposed of everything, realizing about $10,000. He fled from the city, being located in Burlington, Vt., where he was arrested by the police of that city. His case was continued to January 3, and he was held in $2,000 bail, the largest amount ever asked in the local court on such a charge.

MANY BRITISH CANDIDATES MOBBED

London, Dec. 4 (I.N.S.)—Election disorders throughout England, Scotland and Wales are increasing.

Former Colonial Secretary Winston Churhcill was nearly mobbed while making a campaign speech on the outskirts of London. Other candidates were forced to suspend meetings on account of violence.

Glascow has been a hotbed of disorder. Men and women candidates were attacked there.

Colonel Spender Clay, a Tory candidate, was mobbed while attempting to speak on Tonbridge. A stone struck him, slightly injuring him.

MAY ALLISON ASKS DIVORCE FOR CRUELTY

The actor-husband is charged in the complaint with calling Miss Allison names too indecent to be mentioned in the complaint; with flying into rages; with staying away nights and refusing to tell her where he had been, and with threateneing to attack her.

By this, she alleges, her health consequently was impaired.

Miss Allison and Reel were married, the complaint states, on November 25, 1920, in Greenwich, Ct., and were separated about November 5 of this year.

LONG FIRM HALED INTO BANKRUPTCY

The R. H. Long Company of Salem and Framingham was petioned into bankruptcy in the United States District Court by three creditors, whose claims total $684, as follows:

Emile R. Poirier, Salem, $373, for insurance; Saul Silver, Beverly, $155, and Sholto G. Davison, Lynn, $155, the last two for "merchandise sold and delivered." They allege that the Long Company committed an act of bankruptcy in transferring a portion of the property to Harry E. Trask of Peabody, trustee of the estate of Stephen Blaney, a creditor, with the intent to prefer him over other creditors.

INCREASES CITY'S DEPOSIT LIMIT

Mayor Curley's order seeking an amendment to the city ordinances so that the city treasurer can increase the city deposits in banks 50 to 60 per cent. was passed unanimously by the city council.

Heretofore the limit for deposits of city money in the local banks was 50 per cent. of the bank's paid-up capital.

COHAN SCORES BIG HIT IN NEW PLAY

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

NOW we know that it is a friendly, admiring eye that George M. Cohan turns upon the theatrical manager, for in "The Song and Dance Man" at the Selwyn last evening that gentleman was held before you as an open hearted, generous person of kindly disposition—almost too good to be true.

If there is any one thing we can all believe about Mr. Cohan it is his overwhelming love for the theatre—the entire world of spotlights and tinsel—and as "The Song and Dance Man" gradually unfolded there was no great surprise at the author's faithful effort to show the stage and its people at their best.

PLENTY OF SENTIMENT.

Sentiment was laid on with a heavy hand and it is much to Mr. Cohan's credit that he was able, without tricks, to make your heart beat faster.

For the most part a brisk comedy, this newest of Mr. Cohan's writing and acting endeavors slipped naturally into dramatic moments. Among other things you were told that once you are a part of the theatre you can never hope to escape its lure—the more difficulties and tragedies you meet the greater your love be[illegible].

Mr. Cohan hammered this idea home all through his play and before he had finished with the evening there were none to question his sincerity or his logic.

Mr. Cohan's appearance here with "The Song and Dance Man" comes almost under the class of mistakes, as he had not intended the part for himself. The failing courage of Lynn Overman, for whom the play was written and his self-imposed departure from the company, forced Mr. Cohan into the title role. Those who enjoyed last evening's performance are perhaps grateful for the change in players. In any event Mr. Cohan found himself face to face with a friendly audience and he responded by giving a capital impersonation of the small-time song and dance man. It was a Cohanic characterization and ran true to form.

BULLY ENTERTAINMENT.

"The Song and Dance Man" proved itself bully entertainment, revealing many engaging characters. Frederick Perry, as a theatrical man; Robert Cummings, as chief of detectives; Eleanor Woodruff, as the keeper of a boarding house; May Methot, as a song and dance girl; Will Deming, as a director; and Louis Calhern, as a popular illustrator, gave distinguished aid to their star and leader. Mr. Cohan's support could not have been in better hands.

"The Song and Dance Man" bristles with comedy, displays [illegible] of sentiment and flashes at times with sharp dramatics. That should be enough to hold any audience.

SONG WRITER HEADS BILL AT KEITH'S

The bill at Keith's this week is headed by Joseph E. Howard, a song writer who has appeared in musical comedy for more than twenty years. He is also the man who discovered Lila Lee, movie star. He is assisted by Ethelyn Clark, an excellent singer.

James J. Morton, who very vividly explains various acts; Tillis and La Rue, dancers, and a bevy of chorus girls, also delight.

"The Letter From Peeta-Burgh," as read by Frank Marino and Tony Martin, Italian comedians, furnish the audiences with several minutes full of laughter. A clever skit, "Brownderbyville," is presented by Jack Princeton and Jeanne Vernon. In addition there was Toto, the famous clown, to amuse the children and adults alike, and Arthur Hartley and Helen Paterson in a pleasing sketch.

"LADY IN ERMINE" OPENS AT WILBUR

"The Lady In Ermine" began its local engagement at the Wilbur Theatre last evening. This is an operetta that has been presented with success in Europe and which enjoyed a season in New York. In the cast are Walter Woolf, Harry K. Morton, Zella Russell and Nancy Gibbs. A portion of the receipts last evening was given to the American's Christmas Basket Fund. "The Lady In Ermine" will be reviewed in Wednesday's Boston American.

TOUCH OF COMEDY IN 'SONG AND DANCE MAN'

MISS WOODRUFF AND GEORGE COHAN

GREAT TRIBUTE PAID DUSE BY BOSTONIANS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

ELEONORA DUSE yesterday afternoon faced the largest audience that has ever crowded past the gate at the Boston Opera House.

Cultured Boston, curious Boston and just plain everyday playgoers who found a mutual thrill in the return of the long absent Duse filled every corner of the big auditorium, occupied extra chairs in boxes and in orchestra pit, hung over the rail in the funny little half-moon openings in the wall above the highest balcony. Humanity draped itself wherever it could find a place to settle.

GREAT TRIBUTE.

No finer tribute could be paid a great artist than was shown in that outpouring of Boston's best citizenry to give welcome to the famous Italian tragedienne, torn from retirement by Morris Gest for a few matinee performances in a distant land.

Duse had been here before—many years ago—and she was remembered for her wonderful performances, her high spirit and inspiring talents. She was then Duse in the prime of an artistic career that took the world by storm. The enthusiastic audience that opened its arms to her yesterday, like audiences of the past, felt the thrill of her art and joyously yielded to it.

The performance yesterday was almost as much a restoration of Ibsen as it was of Duse, for the Norwegian dramatist's works appear to have fallen into disuse in the theatres. In "Ghosts" Duse had ample means for the display of her great gifts. If she lacked the fire you might have expected it was because stars have their own influence upon both mental and physical efforts. As Mrs. Alving, Duse stood before you as a little white lady-like bit of marble chiselled into human form. She was a dainty creature—and, oh, so white. And the whiteness was accentuated by the play of the lights. There was flash in her eye; there was music in her voice; there was grace in every movement—but there was no physical exertion.

VOICE OF RICH QUALITY.

To the man in the audience having no understanding of the language—and there were many—the charm of the performance was found in the rich quality of Duse's really beautiful voice and in resting the eyes upon the little white lady. Foreign language plays, at best, are dull to the unintelligent, and printed glossaries invariably are imperfect. It would be folly to say that no knowledge of Italian is necessary when facing Duse or that her art is so complete that every spoken word can be understood. But it is overwhelmingly true that a measure of enjoyment can be found in richness of her art as she interprets it. And it is something to be able again to see and hear this great artist.

The performance of "Ghosts" yesterday will go into the records as having the largest audience and greatest receipts the local stage has ever known.

Duse's second and final performance here will be given Thursday afternoon. The play will be "Thy Will Be Done."

Coming Events

"Helen of Troy, N. Y.," will be the attraction at the Colonial beginning next Monday.

"Lollipop," a new Henry W. Savage musical play, will move into the Tremont next Monday.

"East Is West" will engage the attention and talents of Mr. Giles' players at the St. James next week.

"The Conspiracy" is announced as the attraction at the Somerville Theatre for one week, beginning next Monday.

"Connie Comes Through" has been selected as the attraction at the St. James for the week beginning December 17th.

John Barrymore in "Hamlet" will occupy the stage at the Boston Opera House for one week, beginning Monday, December 24th.

LILLIAN GISH TRIUMPH AS 'WHITE SISTER'

There is no doubt about it—Lillian Gish must be presented with another cinema laurel. Furthermore, this wreath should be as decorative in quality as it is substantial in size.

For no such true pathos, such delicate and exquisite portrayal of emotion which this star displayed in the opening of "The White Sister" at the Majestic Theatre yesterday should go unacclaimed.

The film version of F. Marion Crawford's famous novel is a production of which Inspirational Pictures, Inc., can be justly proud.

MARVELOUS SCENES.

Probably nothing enhanced the beauty of the picture so much, other than Miss Gish's excellent interpretation of her role, as did the scenic effects and properties used, all correct as demanded by the chronicle, all geographically real.

The impressive ceremony of Angela Chiarmonte taking her final vows to become a nun, a White Sister, at the very moment when her supposedly lost and dead lover is hurrying across the Mediterranean on a destroyer, a sole survivor of an ill-fated expedition into the desert, is a masterpiece of accurate detail. But this does not stop one from wishing the destroyer could make a little more speed.

The glorious finale which brings forth the eruption of the volcano Vesuvius, the molten lava streaming down upon the unprotected villages and panic-stricken, fleeing inhabitants is the criterion of thrillers.

ADEQUATE CAST.

Yes, Henry King's conception of the story and his subsequent masterful direction are feats which earn high tribute. No suggestion for improvement in the interiors of his villas can be offered. Artistic seems rather an inadequate word.

The choice of his cast, a majority of whom were veritable Italian actors, showed a fine sense for appropriate types. As to those familiar to us, Ronald Colman supported Miss Gish excellently as Captain Giovanni Severi; Gail Kane portrayed the betraying half-sister, Marchesa di Mola, admirably—one hated her, and, after all, that is the proof of a successful villainess, isn't it? J. Barney Sherry was a strong character as Monsignor Saracinesca, the "balance wheel" of the drama.

But, above all, there was the [illegible] Lillian Gish, delicate to the point of fragileness, vibrant silk-drawn emotion. If you go, as you must, be prepared for a pleasant tear or two.

GAY PIRATES TAKE WALDRON'S CASINO

Fun and adventure on a pirate isle and on a pirate ship, when bold and merry buccaneers entertain a party of modern American flappers, furnished the theme for the burlesque given by "The Radio Girls" as one of the features of the three-in-one continuous perforance program at Waldron's Casino yesterday. The title of the burlesque presented by the Radio Girls was "The Isle of Adventure."

There were two acts and six scenes, all crowded with comedy and thrills. The action takes place on the pirate ship, "Fearless," in a pirate castle, on an island inhabited by pirates, and in a place known as "Where the Ghost Walks."

Week's Features

ORPHEUM—"A Woman of Paris," written and directed by Charles Chaplin, announced as the photoplay feature; also news and comedy reels. The vaudeville section is headed by Julia Kelety, a musical comedy star recently with "The Gingham Girl."

LOEW'S STATE—"The Light That Failed," with Jacqueline Logan, Percy Marmont, Sigrid Holmquist and David Torrence; also Victor Hugo Halperin's "Tea With a Kick." News and comedy reels.

STRAND—"If Winter Comes," a dramatization of Hutchinson's popular novel. News and comedy reels.

BOSTON—"Marriage Morals," with Tom Moore, and a vaudeville bill headed by Ross and Moon in a dancing act.

OLYMPIA—Colleen Moore in "Flaming Youth," supported by Milton Sills and Elliott Dexter. Vaudeville program of five acts.

SCOLLAY SQ.—Mrs. Sidney Drew in "A Cup of Tea," with vaudeville features headed by a tabloid thriller, "Lights Out."

MODERN AND BEACON—"Lucretia Lombard," with Monte Blue and Irene Rich; "Cameo Kirby," with John Gilbert, and Round 4 of the new Fighting Blood serial.

CAPITOL—Marie Provost in "The Wanters"; also news and comedy reels and a special musical program.

CENTRAL SQ.—Gloria Swanson in "Zaza," with news and comedy reels and five acts of vaudeville.

CODMAN SQ.—"Ponjola," with Anna Q. Nilsson and James Kirkwood, and "Times Have Changed," with William Russell.

BOWDOIN SQ.—"The Musican Follies," a musical comedy offering; also "The Steadfast Heart" and other pictures.

BRISK DRAMA AT THE SOMERVILLE

Last night at the Somerville Theatre a large and appreciative audience witnessed the production of "The Eternal Magdalene." The story in brief is that of a rich and influential citizen who is heading a movement to rid his town of the social evil, and to help this end of has been largely instrumental in bringing to town a blood-and-thunder evangelist whose prototype is plainly suggested. The play is decidedly impressive in its theme, exposing the religion which hates the sinner but not the sin, as contrasted with true religion. Ann MacDonald, as "the woman," lifted the part to a plane of poetic idealism by the sincerity and truth of her acting, conveying mystical suggestion and profound pathos. Frank Thomas gave a fine impersonation of the hard-hearted self-righteous, pitiless man. Bernard Nedell was the relieving touch of brightness as the breezy and wholesome reporter, which he acted with naturalness and humor.

'MAGNOLIA' IS WELL ACTED AT ST. JAMES

Walter Gilbert and Adelyn Bushnell played stellar roles in Booth Tarkington's delightful romantic comedy, "Magnolia," presented last night by the Boston Stock Company at the St. James Theatre.

Walter Gilbert gave a wonderful portrayal of Tom Rumford, the son of a royal Southern family, who had received all the benefits of a foreign education and who, upon returning to his Southern home, found it full of strife and blood which was strongly against his ideals.

On being disowned by his father, General Rumford, for showing cowardice, he went out into the world to redeem his honor. He becomes the notorious Colonel Blake, and makes a name for himself as the most feared man on the lower Mississippi River.

His partner in crime is General Orlando Jackson, a well known and much feared gambler. Mark Kent plays the part of the General. After seven years on the river Tom, or Colonel Blake as he is now known, comes back to father's home, just in time to save the old homestead, and to win the love of his sweetheart, Lucy. He is received with open arms by everybody but Lucy, who afterwards learns to love him again.

Miss Bushnell played opposite Gilbert as Lucy, the sweetheart. Jill Middleton's interpretation of Mexico, an Octoroon and gambling house mistress, deserves much credit.

Others in the cast were Edward Darney as Major Paterson, Houston Richards as Joe, his brother, and Harold Chase as General Rumford.

Plays That Remain

SHUBERT—"Mary Jane McKane." A musical play that boasts of a real story. Don't miss "The Flannel Petticoat Girl" number.

COLONIAL—George White's Scandals. Frollicksome revue made up in the familiar style, with romping girls and other diversions.

PLYMOUTH—"The Love Child." An Americanized version of a French problem play, including the usual social irregularities.

HOLLIS—"So This Is London!" An enlivening farce in which Lawrence D'Orsay plays a high-class Englishman according to rules.

DOUBLE SHOW FOR GAYETY PATRONS

If two big shows for the price of one is a "good buy" in theatre tickets, patrons of the Gayety Theatre will enjoy a bargain week while Jimmie Cooper remains for daily showings of his assemblage of white and colored talent. The white contingent, headed by the chattering and agile Jimmie himself, holds sway preceding intermission of song, dance and comicalities as only darkies can.

Alice Belaine, Midgie Gibbons and Grace Goodale are herders of the great flock of pretty girls who will the stage with grace and beauty while the "white folks" are at play.

ENGLISH ACTOR THRILLS IN 'HAMLET'

Sir John Martin-Harvey played a Hamlet at the Boston Opera House last night that alternately thrilled, delighted, saddened and horrified his audience.

Many agreed that Sir John's masterful handling of the role has never been outdone in Boston since the memorable visit years ago of Sir Johnstone Forbes-Robertson.

Gordon McLeod scored as the ghost of the dead king. His truly wonderful voice reached every part of the theatre and seemed to bring from the very rafters answering echoes of his heart-broken entreaties from the grave for Hamlet, his son, to avenge him.

"Hamlet" will be offered again tonight, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow evening. During the latter part of the week Sir John and his English company will produce "The Taming of the Shrew."

Straus Writes Opera

Berlin, Dec. 4.—Richard Straus is writing a new opera, for which Hugo Hoffmannsthal is supplying the book. The theme is taken from Greek mythology and Starus says the opera will abound in humor.

4 HORSES DIE IN STABLE BLAZE

There passed away this day in Charlestown:

Vanilla, aged three years and six months.

Strawberry, aged two years and eleven months.

Coffee, aged five years and two months.

If their spirits welded together as they passed and there is a horse heaven, they may have already appeared there as Neapolitans.

They were the faithful steeds of a Somerville ice cream manufacturer. Their lives were snuffed out today as they lay in their straw beds in Toothaker Brothers' stable at No. 28 Cambridge street, Charlestown.

The barn caught fire from manner undetermined and was destroyed with $2,000 loss.

'RADIO MANIA' IS WIFE CHARGE

Minneapolis, Dec. 4.—Charging "radio mania," Mrs. Cora May White, thirty-three, has filed suit asking a divorce from Gerald White.

Mrs. White declares that the so-called radio mania has alienated her husband's affections, that he spent his money for radio apparatus while neglecting to buy clothes for herself and their seven-year-old daughter, that he stayed up late at night listening to the loud speaker and kept her from falling asleep, that he compelled her to "listen in" for the voices of his artist friends and that he indulged in profanity when local stations made it difficult for him to tune in on distant ones.

These acts resulted in a separation about three weeks ago, according to Mrs. White's attorney.

Man Loses Arm

James Ryder, twenty-six years old, of No. 8 Grant avenue, Brighton, a brakeman employed by the Boston & Albany railroad, had his arm amputated at the Massachusetts General Hospital after he was injured while coupling cars in the Beacon Park yards of the railroad in Brighton. The arm was crushed between two cars.

SIX CHILDREN SAVE MOTHER FROM JAIL

DELLELO FAMILY OF HYDE PARK

The fact that Mrs. Virginia Dellelo, of No. 65 Stoughton street, Hyde Park, is the mother of six children saved her from being sent to jail when she was found guilty in Superior Court of perjury in connection with furnishing bail for a prisoner. Judge Wait fined her $1,000. Mrs. Dellelo made false statements as to her property when she furnished bail for Joseph Condello, under indictment for robbery and now believed to be a fugitive from justice. The Dellelo children shown above, left to right, are: Frank, one and one-half years old; James, three; Esther, nine; Joseph, nine; Elinor, ten; and Julia, thirteen. At top is Mrs. Dellolo.

3 DIE AS PLANES CRASH IN AIR

San Diego, Cal., Dec 4.—A mid-air collision resulted in three aviators in a battle fleet squadron meeting almost instant death. According to Capt. Craven, of the Naval Air Station, several planes were practising manoeuvres when two of the number crashed with such force as to demolish the machines. Lieut. Frank M. Byers, sole occupant of a Voight speed plane, and F. E. Enstwistle and W. B. Jackson, chief machinist's mate, driving a naval land plane, were killed, it was said.

LYNN SHOE FIRM TO LOCATE HERE

Brophy Brothers, Lynn shoe manufacturers since 1891, will begin operations in their new factory at No. 89 A street, South Boston tomorrow. About 200 hands will be employed. The firm started to auction its whole eight floors of high grade shoe machinery at No. 232 Market street, Lynn, with which it formerly turned out 500 pairs daily of women's shoes, today.

BOLL WEEVIL IN U. S. BAD FOR BRITAIN

Washington, Dec. 4.—A crisis in the English cotton industry has been brought about by the ravages of the boll weevil in the cotton fields of the United States, combined with the European situation and conditions in the world generally, according to the Department of Agriculture.

Reports to the department forecast hard times in the English cotton centres this Winter.

Thousands of men and women in Lancashire are working half time, these reports state, and some mills are running at a loss to retain their skilled employes pending a return of good times.

One trade union secretary estimates 40,000 operatives have left the industry for good. India and China, Lancashire' largest customers for piece goods, can now buy only a fraction of the quantity they purchased before the war.

"Interest in the methods of cotton growing in the United States, it appears, has been tremendously stimulated in England by the near famine due to the boll weevil," says the Department of Agriculture.

"When American cotton was available in sufficient quantity there was little concern about its cultivation, ginning and shipping. But the present shortage, besides forcing the mills to run half time, has made the raw material so expensive that it is hard to find a market for the finished product.

"Progress in the fight against the weevil is therefore as vital to the English spinner as it is to the American grower of cotton."

WOMEN HAVE TO FIGHT, HUBBY IN LOVE SUIT SAYS

So said Robert E. Norton, ex-sailor of East Canton street, South End, who is the subject of unpleasentness between his wife and a friend of the family, Miss Bertha Morse.

A bill in equity filed by Mrs. Cecelia Norton to prevent Miss Morse "from ellenating the affections of Robert E. Norton" is now pending in the Superior Court. The case comes up for a hearing tomorrow.

SUED FOR DIVORCE

In 1922 Norton sued his wife for divorce. The judge talked to the couple, and had Robert, Jr., then three years old, brought into court. There were tears and then the three Nortons left the court reconciled—for the time being.

Miss Bertha Morse

Mrs. Cecelia Norton

Miss Morse, who had helped Mrs. James Keefe, her sister, care for Mrs. Norton during an illness of the latter, became a frequent caller at the home and telephoned more frequently, it was said. The bill in Equity was filed.

SEVERAL TIMES IN JAIL.

Norton had married during a furlough from the Navy. He obtained leave of absence to greet John E., Jr., when the latter was born. In March, 1920, with the baby ill and no leave of absence in sight, Norton took French leave and served three months on Deer Island as a result. He joined his wife and child at the end of the three months, and then—he met Miss Morse.

TAXI-PLANE SERVICE TO SNOW-BOUND CAMP

Menominee, Mich., Dec. 4.—Lumber camps and snow-bound towns of the North Woods no longer will be isolated with the first heavy snowfall and freeze. Arline Emmes today announced that he will operate a taxi-plane equipped with sled runners and snow skids for passenger service in the snow-bound areas fringing the lakes. Emmes' plane is capable of doing sixty miles an hour on ice and snow without going in the air. He plans to take passengers to Green Bay in forty minutes, instead of making it a several days' trip by sleigh.

Girl Waits For Garlick to Serve Term

FLO LEWIS

New York, Dec. 4.—How much is the ability to kick 'em high and straight worth to a musical comedy dancer?

Juries have been asked to translate nearly everything into dollars and cents, and now a jury before Supreme Court Justice Lydon is being asked by Miss Flo [illegible] to award her $100,000 damages against F. Ray Comstock and Herman Timberg because, she alleges, due to their negligence she has lost the ability to kick as high and as gracefully as she formerly [illegible].

According to Miss Lewis she was doing a specialty dance in Mr. Timberg's musical comedy "Tick-Tack-Toe," at the Princess Theatre, March 16, 1920, when she tripped "over a crack in the floor" and fell and broke her knee-cap. In addition, she alleges, she received painful bruises and lost several teeth.

The negligence of Mr. Timberg, who produced the musical comedy and of Mr. Comstock, who leased the theatre, lies in the fact, she alleges, that they permitted the crack to remain in the stage floor. Meanwhile, she complains, she can't kick as she used to, and says it is now up to Timberg and Comstock to "kick in."

BROWN STAR, 16-YEAR-OLD GIRL, ELOPE

John Wentworth

The elopement was revealed when Dr. Clement received a telegram. "Jack and I are married," it read. "Letter will follow."

Wentworth was captain of the football team in his freshman year at Brown. He starred in football at Thayer Academy. His fortune was left him by his father, in care of the boy's aunt, Mrs. B. U. Richards, secretary of the State Board of Health for Rhode Island.

[illegible] a Providence [illegible] Wentworth met the attractive daughter of Dr. Clement, and it appeared to be a case of love at first sight for both.

Love for football and his failure to make the team because of low marks in his studies led Wentworth to forsake the fields of education and go to work for J. Wendell Boyden of No. 95 Munroe road, Quincy, South Shore automobile agent, and the father of Wentworth's college chum.

The snappy yellow roadster racing model Wentworth drove about in was a familiar sight along the South Shore last Summer, as well as in Providence, where he was known as "John F." He made almost daily trips to Providence.

EAST BOSTON BOY GONE SINCE JULY

A general alarm has been sent out by the East Boston police, asking aid in their search for Michael Mazzola, fifteen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Salvatore Mazzola, of No. 201 Havre street, East Boston.

The boy started out on the morning of July 20, presumably to seek work and he has not returned.

WETS FILL ALL JAILS OUT IN MINNESOTA

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 4.—With county jails in Minnesota filled to overflowing with persons convicted in Minneapolis Federal courts of violating the prohibition laws, E. A. Rustad, United States marshal, is seeking additional jail accommodations for bootleggers to come to trial during the session of Federal Court opening today.

During the term just ended in Minneapolis Federal Judge J. F. McGee disposed of nearly 500 cases, most of them violations of the Volstead Act. Many of the prisoners were sentenced to county jails for terms of 30, 60 and 90 days and up.

Because of crowded conditions in the county jail here several bootleggers have been forced temporarily to stand or sleep on the floor at night.

Richmond, Mo., Dec. 4.—Fire early today destroyed the J. S. Hughes & Company Banking House building here and threatened the downtown district. Loss $100,000.

SEE VICTORY FOR KLAN IN PORTLAND

Early Returns Indicate Ticket Backed by Hooded Society Is Winning

Portland, Me., Dec. 4.—Portland's first municipal election under the new council-manager form of government, with the biggest vote ever cast here, looks like a victory for the Ku Klux Klan.

With six of the fourteen precincts yet to be counted in the council contest, indications were that the Klan ticket was elected.

Of the seventeen candidates for council on the preferential ballot, five endorsed by the Klan were leading. Five were to be elected.

Mrs. Florence A. Stevens of the five first choice Klan candidates was being closely contested by Charles L. Donahue, candidate opposed by the Klan.

George F. West, Klan second choice candidate, followed closely on the heels of Donahue and his position was strengthened by a huge second choice vote which may, in the final count, place him among the winning five.

RECORD VOTE.

The four leading Klan candidates are Chapman, Deering, Allen and Grant.

The endorsement of candidates by the Klan here coincided with the endorsement of the Committee of One Hundred which corresponds to the Good Government Association of Boston.

With a possible vote of approximately 26,000, the total cast was about 21,000, which, allowing for people ill, out of town or kept from voting for other reasons, is calculated to be close to a 100 per cent. vote of those available to vote.

The normal vote cast in Portland municipal elections is 12,000, the present vote, due to the hot campaign arising out of Klan and anti Klan factions, nearly doubling it.

The vote was a record one in every ward and precinct. Wards 8 and 9, Klan strongholds, cast exceptionally heavy votes.

HECTIC CAMPAIGN.

Due to the preferential type of ballot, the counting of the vote is a gigantic task and will consume all of today at the least. Fourteen precincts in nine wards, with first, second, third and fourth choices cause this.

Counting of the Council vote was decided as the first job. Counting of votes in the school board and ward office contests follow, with every ballot to be handled over for each.

Since the new form of city government, advocated by the Klan, was chosen in September, 1,800 names have been added to the voting lists by the Board of Registration.

For three weeks the campaign has been waged between the Committee of One Hundred and the Klan. The latter announced its choices at a public meeting three days before the election. Pink cards bearing the Klan favorites were distributed the past few days and some were deposited in voting booths during the election, but were removed by the wardens as fast as found.

Consulted Seer About Elopers

DRAMA PRINCIPALS

At top, the former Hazel Mansfield of Somerville, now the bride of George W. Invernizzi (centre), whom she married in New York city after eloping from her mother's home. At bottom, Mrs. Mae Mansfield, who says a Somerville clairvoyant foretold her daughter's elopement and return.

As foretold by a clairvoyant, Helen Mansfield, pretty and twenty-two years old, of No. 633 Somerville avenue, Somerville, is back home, married—and unforgiven.

Helen ran away on the same day that George W. Invernizzi of No. 23 Cedar street, Somerville, disappeared.

Her mother, Mrs. Mae Mansfield, was nearly heartbroken. She went to a clairvoyant.

"She ran away with a man," he told her. "On the twelfth day she returns. Don't worry, she is married now. They went to Providence and two other cities. When she returns you will have your choice of taking her back or turning her out."

And Helen, who had gone November 20, did come back on December 1, which, counting the day of her disappearance, was the twelfth day.

Thousands Eager to See American's Set at Third Annual Show Opening

The Boston American's superneutrodyne circuit proved one of the chief attractions to the 4,000 persons who attended the opening of the Third Annual Radio Exposition at Horticultural Hall.

A dense crowd surged all evening around the American's booths, Nos. 152 and 153, inspecting the set, details of the construction and operation of which appear daily in the American.

The exhibition halls were packed with radio enthusiasts, fans and tyros, but interest was fairly well distributed and the crowd kept circulating fast enough to give everyone a chance to see what they [illegible].

With five afternoons and evenings to follow the record-breaking opening, it is expected that the total attendance may reach higher than 35,000.

'RADIO WIVES' THERE.

Hundreds of women and even more boys were among the crowds. There may have ben some "radio widows" last night, [illegible] hubbies were at the exposition alone, but there were nearly as many radio wives, who accompanied their husbands, questioned the experts and discussed their hook-ups.

The experts in the booths were busy gentlemen. They courteously answered thousands of questions fired by those who came just to get the answers to queries that had apparently been baffling them for weeks and months.

Others came to seek new suggestions, improvements, information. The exposition is a radio clinic. Rapid fire-like the experts in word will dissect your hook-up and reconstruct your set while you strain to catch his technical phrases.

Inquiring fans seemed to single out M. A. Simmons, inventor of the super-neutrodyne, as an expert who talked radio facts with a clear head.

LINOTYPE BUSY.

The American's exhibit includes a linotype in operation, writing your name while you wait. This marvelous machine is always a wonderful puzzle to the uninitiated, and the crowd at the booth was equally divided between it and Mr. Simmons with his super-neutrodyne set.

From six o'clock on, Simmons an

BURGLARS GET $3000 LOOT IN BROOKLINE

Mrs. Madeline C. Hart of No. 143 Fuller street, Brookline, arrived home after an evening at the theatre to find her home ransacked and valuables worth $3,000 taken.

On reaching the house, Mrs. Hart, who was, before her marriage, Miss Madeline Cobb, youngest granddaughter of the late Marshall Cobb, head of a well known Boston firm, found the door of her apartment open. It had been forced with a jimmy.

She entered and found the house in disorder.

The police were called, and they found fingerprints on a clock the burglars had moved. Through these prints they expect to make arrests.

The following is a list of the valuables stolen: Two fur coats, one sport coat, a full chest of silver, a pearl necklace, jeweled shoe buckles, a solid silver toilet set, four clocks, a fur neckpiece, a tea set, a suitcase with the initials M C H marked on the side, a traveling bag, a number of gold pencils and lingerie valued at $300.

MARX CABINET FACES CRISIS IN REICHSTAG

Berlin, Dec. 4 (I N S.).—The Reichstag met today to determine the fate of the new Marx Cabinet which succeeded the Stresemann Ministry. Another crisis was imminent owing to the opposition of both nationalists and socialists to the new regime.

It was understood President Ebert was ready to dissolve the Reichstag if the Marx Ministers was voted out of office.

Chancellor Marx was to present a bill asking the Reichstag to confer dictatorial powers upon the cabinet.

When the text was made public it was bitterly assailed by Vorwaerts, the socialists' newspaper organ.

While John A. Garlick, confessed Maynard embezzler, was threatening revelations and an expose of certain men prominent in Maynard finances, on his way to begin serving an indefinite term in the Concord reformatory, his sweetheart, Florence Booth, of Boston, assured him of her loyalty and declared she would be waiting for him when he was released.

Garlick confessed to embezzling $24,000 from the Maynard Trust Company last Spring. Bank officials were reported to have promised they would drop the case if Garlick would make restitution and plead guilty.

[illegible]titution was made of all but [illegible]. Garlick, in an effort to raise the remaining $6,000, was given a week to interview 200 persons who had signed a petition for clemency. Then he was taken before Judge Whiting in the Middlesex Superior Court to be sentenced.

When sentence was pronounced Garlick's pretty sweetheart left her seat with the convicted man's parents and sisters and, rushing to him, said, loud enough to be [illegible] by those standing nearby:

"Keep your courage, Jack. I shall be waiting for you no matter how long they keep you in jail.

"Nothing can make me lose my faith in you. I shall be waiting, and when you are free we shall begin life again."

From the time suspicion of the thefts from the bank first pointed at Garlick his mother, Miss Booth, loyal to him and one of the first to express publicly her loyalty.

GARLICK REVENGEFUL.

When Garlick was sentenced, his cheerful, optimistic attitude left him. He became bitter and revengeful.

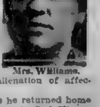
"I shall tell who it was who took advantage of poor, ignorant foreigners and induced them to buy American Woolen stock with their savings and who then entrusted the stock to bankers to sell for them," he declared.

"Those workingmen were induced to buy stock on installments when it was $60 a share and to sell when it was $80 a share. Few of them got as much as $73 for their shares. I know who got the other $7 and I intend to tell."

Miss Booth, a former [illegible] teacher in New York, married Joseph Truiano in 1919. She lived with him only a few months, and then petitioned for annulment. She alleged that her husband made fraudulent statements when the marriage license was granted. After a long court fight the marriage was annulled and she resumed her maiden name.

SUIT IS ENTERED FOR ALIENATION

Russell Williams, a confectioner of No. 852 Riverway, who is being sued for divorce by his wife and who several months ago filed an attachment against the property of Charles F. Kinum, president of the Aetna Products Company, has formally brought suit against Kinum for $100,000 for alleged alienation of affections.



Mrs. Williams.

Williams alleges he returned home from a business trip to find Kinum in his wife's apartment. He thrashed the intruder and forcibly ejected him, he said. Kinum's bank account is attached.

Kinum denies the charges of Williams and characterizes them as "preposterous and absolutely insane."

SPEAK UP LOUDLY AND HELP TO STOP RADIO INTERFERENCE

NEEDLESS CODE CAN BE BANNED BY PETITION

Whenever questions involving a collision of public welfare with commercial enterprises for private profit have arisen and the public has made its wishes clearly known, regulations have always been made to protect the many from the few.

Not long ago hideous billboards were plastered over every hillside, lined every highway. Already that nuisance is being regulated out of existence. The many spoke.

It is the same with the needless interference that now ruins broadcast reception. It is necessary only that the thousands and thousands of broadcast listeners make their voice heard, in unmistakable fashion, and code interference will go the way of all public nuisances.

NAVY RULES RADIO.

The code that disrupts the sermon you are listening to doesn't concern some sinking liner, as you may have been told—it probably relates to the disposition of many bales of wool or cases of such in some vessel's hold. Or it may be instructions for some ship to make a certain port to get more cargo.

When distress signals are in the air the U. S. Navy at once intervenes, and all broadcasting stops at the Navy command. And all interference stops at the Navy command.

PRIVATE MESSAGES.

Practically every dot and dash that crashes in on your set means private profit for some company or some individual.

And the question of private profit enters in still another way. Radio communication started with the simple, inexpensive receiver of the coherer type, and was followed soon by the rectifying crystal.

In spite of the limitations of the crystal, it is by far more numerous at sea right now than the tube receiving set. It was only a short time ago—a matter of months, merely—that vacuum tubes were released for commercial use on shipboard.

SIGN THE PETITION.

To reach the crystal receiver, the spark transmitter is about the only efficient instrument. And it not only reaches the crystal but it busts up our broadcasts.

Amateurs—the dot and dash chaps sending on waves under 200 meters long ago realized the desirability of the tube transmitter. It needed no laws to make them change over, junk the "stone crusher." If these chaps, many of them youngsters, can see the light, then the offending companies should also see the light.

And the way to hasten the process is to sign the American petition to President Coolidge.

WHAT SIGNERS SAY:

Radio Editor:

I believe this movement to be one of the best movements to be started since the broadcasting of programs, etc., started a couple of years back.

The voting of preference to various kinds of programs to my mind is foolish. The average broadcasting program is good enough for anyone and the average station endeavors to give variety and I have always been more than satisfied.

I certainly hope that you will be successful in getting code station wave lengths separated from the broadcasting stations so that one can enjoy the programs.

H. B. FORMHALS.

CODE SPOILED IT.

Radio Editor:

I wish to say that I am wishing you the best of luck if you can have this code interference stopped, as it is a nuisance. I might also add that I have a fine tube neutrodyne and I had "England" just long enough to hear British Isles, but the code butted in.

RICHARD H. STANLEY,
84 Hancock street, Dorchester.

CONCERTS SPOILED

Radio Editor:

Please find enclosed our names which we send with pleasure for if by so doing we can receive any relief from code and regenerative sets which should be controlled in some way if possible as it spoils all concerts almost every night. Yours for success.

Dandruff Soon Destroys the Hair
"USE LIQUID ARVON"

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

FANS FLOCK TO SEE SUPER

swered a broadside of queries, carefully explaining his pet. The American's booth was tastily decorated for the opening, with a newspaper touch, and there were radio-maps, code-interference petitions to the President and other things to interest the crowds.

One of the hits of the show is tucked away in a corner—the sets made by amateurs in a prize competition, winners to be announced Friday.

Among these there were several beautiful, glass-enclosed sets, one with even a plate-glass dial-front. One crystal set is only a little more than two inches square. Another is in a shell, a third in a turtle. Another set is in a doll's victrola, and a small vanity-case houses another, probably designed with some future fashion in mind.

Some of the big sets shown in the regular booths are beautiful articles of furniture and worth seeing, even though they are expensive. There are plenty of small sets, loud-speakers, loops, and miscellaneous apparatus on exhibition.

An evening theatre program was broadcast around the hall with a loud speaker on a set installed by the Association of Broadcast Listeners. Efforts were made to hear Donald B. MacMillan from the Arctic.

One of the motion pictures is a Godsend to beginners, who are many because it answers in pictures and motion diagrams these natural questions which every beginner asks and which are so hard to answer in more words: "How do radio waves reach the receiver?" "How can a rippley wave carry the sound of a voice?" "What is a piece of crystal for?"

The movie hall was crowded all evening for this picture, "The Mystery Box," and another, "The Audion." These give an example of the practical educational value in motion pictures.

The prize of a $40 radio set, offered each evening to the person whose name is picked out of a huge box into which everyone is invited to drop his signature, was won last night by A. H. Woodbury of No. 226 Bay State road, Back Bay.

Those who went to the first night of the exposition with eyes and ears open, and a ready tongue for questioning, got a lot of practical radio information.

11 MISSING IN MYSTERY OF SEA

Buenos Aires, Dec. 4.—A wrecked boat, 11 of its passengers missing, and nearby a rowboat containing a man, naked except for a cartridge belt and revolver holster about his waist, are the only clues to a mystery of the sea which is puzzling Argentine police.

The lone man, a member of the crew of the wrecked craft, refuses to make any statement, but has been held, together with other boatmen from the vessel. The police believe the boatmen murdered the passengers, among whom were several women and children.

DEMOCRAT DEFI OVER RADIO

A challenge for a debate to be broadcasted over the radio between the Good Government Association and the Democratic City Committee of Boston for a discussion of the respective merits of their candidates for the coming city election was passed by 150 members of the latter committee during a ratification meeting of candidates held in the American House.

This committee, of which John I. Fitzgerald is president and Robert E. Bigney secretary, meets once a year. This meeting attended largely by present and former office holders in Boston was declared to be the most enthusiastic one in fifteen years.

CANDIDATES INDORSED.

The candidates for the City Council and two for the school committee were eindorsed at the meeting.

They are Councillor James T. Moriarty, James T. Purcell and Louis Lebowitz for the City Council, and Dr. Walter G. McGauley and Edward M. Sullivan, Esq., for the school committee.

Two speakers were assigned by the committee to take part in the debate over the radio, at a date to be set soon. Representative Susan W. FitzGerald will speak in behalf of the women and Representative James H. Brennan for the opposite [illegible]

RADIO QUERIES

Radio Editor—I have a two stage audio frequency amplifier that I would like to use with the Superneutrodyne. Can you show me how this would have to be connected?

W. A. C.

No. 721 Hyde Park avenue, Roe[illegible]

Build the Superneutrodyne radio frequency tuner and detector according to diagrams soon to be published to answer many other similar requests.

Radio Editor—Will W.V. 199 tubes work with the Superneutrodyne described in your paper?

A. M. MADER.

St. [illegible]ns, Vt.

Yes.

Radio Editor—I have an R. C. Radio receiver and should like to build the Superneutrodyne set. My R. C. set is subdivided into two parts. One part contains the detector tube and two steps of audio frequency. Would it be practical to divide the set and build just the radio frequency transformers, condensers, etc., and bring the leads to the proper posts of the detector of the R. C.

SAUL HYMAN,
No. 28 Huntington avenue.

Yes, if the proper R. F. couplers are connected in the right way. The regular Superneutrodyne, however, probably would work better because of shorter leads, etc.

Radio Editor:

Radio Editor—Am very much interested in your Super-neutrodyne, plans of which are being printed in your paper, and have purchased Federal parts exclusively as per directions. Try as I may I cannot make out measurements for drilling the panel, as quite a few of these are blurred and it is very hard to get the proper measurements without taking the chances of making mistakes. You will probably notice this yourself in looking over the panel layout given in your Nov. 23 issue. Some of the measurements are nothing more than blots of ink. May I ask you to be kind enough to please mail me a panel layout, such as was shown in Nov. 23 Boston American, with measurements clearly given, so that I may have the pleasure of proceeding with my set? I assure you this favor will be heartily appreciated. Thanking you in advance I am,

ARCHIE R. POIRER.
Providence, R. I.

We suggest that you wait for the new drawings soon to be published simplifing the hookup and panel layout.

Radio Editor—Can the Boston American New Superneutrodyne set be used with dry cell tubes, such as W. D. 11, etc. If so, will you kindly give me the correct hookup? I have parts ready to start building set, but just heard it will not work with peanut tubes.

WM. R. BULL.
Springfield.

Yes, with the original hookup.

Radio Editor:

I was clearly amazed on reading the Radio page of the Boston American to find that so simple a set as the Superneutrodyne, described by you, could show such remarkable and easily obtainable results. I was about to make up my list of parts that I would need to build an eight (8) tube super-neutrodyne set, but while I was going to build it, I still had a feeling that it was going to be rather a complicated affair and a long while before I would expect any results.

Now all thoughts of the superneutrodyne have vanished and I would like very much to know if you could possibly advise me where I can see a set as described by you. If you could kindly let me have the [illegible] and address of the owner I [illegible] be more than pleased to make him a visit and at the same time see this set.

MORRIS M. MALIS.
Worcester.

Perhaps there is some Worcester reader who has built a set who will communicate with you. One of these sets will be on exhibition this week at the Radio Show in Boston, at the American booth, No. 152 and No. 153, Room C.

NEEDS AF TRANSFORMERS

Radio Editor

Am interested in the new superneutradyne set you are running in your paper, and I have purchased the parts. A friend tells me I need two audio-frequency transformers, although they are not mentioned.

G. N. A., JR.

Two audio-frequency transformers are, of course, required for the two stages of audio-frequency amplification.

FOR THREE TUBES.

Radio Editor:

In regard to the diagram you are now showing in your paper. Can a three-tube set be built on the same lines? I would like to make a set, but cannot spend enough for four tubes, and am very much taken up with your hookup. If a three-tube set can be built, would you tell me what to leave off from the four-tube arrangement? M. F. Macl.

A three-tube set can be built simply by leaving off one stage of audio-frequency.

CARDBOARD TUBING.

Radio Editor:

Does it make any difference to use cardboard tubing instead of bakelite or formica, as I can get neither of these in Boston? A FAN.

The bakelite or formica tubes are on sale in several Boston stores. Cardboard could be used if properly treated, but we do not recommend it.

Never make light of constipation or any one of its symptoms—there is no telling what disease you may be heading into! The one thing to do—IMMEDIATELY—is to fight constipation to the last ditch! Not with pills or cathartics; they cannot give you lasting relief! Not with foods with a low bran content; they do not have the bran-bulk to do the work!

What you need, what will give you permanent relief is Kellogg's Bran because it is ALL BRAN! Kellogg's is scientifically prepared to relieve constipation. It will relieve the chronic case or the mild case. You need it, your family needs it!

But, you must eat Kellogg's Bran regularly—each day! At least two tablespoonfuls; in chronic cases this amount with each meal! And, eating Kellogg's Bran is a delight rather than a hardship. It has a delicious, appealing nut-like flavor that wins the most fastidious appetite.

Every day when you eat Kellogg's Bran as a cereal, sprinkled on your favorite hot or cold cereal or cooked or mixed with hot cereals, think of the health every spoonful contains for you! Think how Kellogg's Bran is sweeping and cleansing the alimentary tract; how it is driving out the toxic poisons and freeing your system from dangers of dreaded diseases! Your physician will recommend it.

All grocers sell Kellogg's Bran; it is also obtainable at first-class hotels and clubs in individual packages. Ask for it at your restaurant.

FANS WARNED TO GET RIGHT PARTS FOR SUPERNEUTRODYNE

COILS MUST BE SPACED PROPERLY

Booklet With Prints and Minute Instructions Soon to Be Printed

By M. A. SIMMONS,
Inventor of the Superneutrodyne.

A word of warning seems necessary.

Be positive, if you buy the Superneutrodyne radio transformers ready wound, that they are correctly made, according to the specifications which have been printed in the American.

One man brought me a set he had made which refused to work properly. He said everything was according to directions except the R. F. coils. These he bought all wound and coupled, but only because he has been unable to buy the proper condensite tubes on which to wind his own transformers.

The set wouldn't work—I tried it.

Then, after checking the wiring, I examined the readymade R. F. transformers. First I took them right out of the set, putting in the regular Simmons coils that I had already made myself. The set worked.

INCORRECTLY SPACED.

When I tore down the readymade transformers, I found they were not made according to the Superneutrodyne specifications, they were incorrectly spaced, the primary windings were all wrong and the result was a set that failed to operate properly.

But these things had been sold to this man as Oked parts. So be careful. If you can't wind and mount your own R. F. transformers, demand that substitutes offered be fully guaranteed as the correct Simmons [illegible].

Many readers have asked where they can see a Superneutrodyne set in [illegible]. Of course this week, one of these sets will be on exhibit at the Radio Show, at the American booth, 152 and 153, in Room [illegible] Horticultural Hall.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

There will be someone there to answer your questions. Be sure to call at this booth, anyway, and sign the petition to President Coolidge asking his intercession to lessen interference, code and reckless tuning, that is now doing so much to injure broadcasting.

If you have not already started your Superneutrodyne, we suggest that you wait a little, for new descriptions and specifications to be published in this page shortly.

These new designs include radical improvements that make even the Super a more efficient set.

When this new Super series has been published in the American, we plan to incorporate them all in a booklet, with large blueprints showing the panel layout, the baseboard layout, and with simplified hook-up diagrams, of the different Supers, for tuner and detector alone, tuner and detector with one stage audio, and tuned and detector with two stages of audio.

The booklet will also contain complete, easy-to-follow instructions that should make the Super the ideal set for even a girl to build.

Watch for the new Super series.

CUSTOMS EMPLOYES GIVEN WAGE RAISE

Wage increases of $240 per year were passed out by Collector of the Port W. W. Lufkin to 25 of the laborer force employed at the Appraisers Stores and to 10 of those at the Custom House. They will hereafter receive $1320 annually, of which $20 per month is a bonus granted by Congress some months ago to help the lower-salaried government workers to meet the increased living costs.

NEWSBOYS' PLAY AT SHAWMUT THEATRE

The Dalfoe Club, composed of Boston Newsboys will hold a theatrical entertainment in the Shawmut Theatre tomorrow evening. The entertainment will be known as the "Frolics" and will be staged by Mrs. Scott of Dorchester well known in amateur theatrical circles.

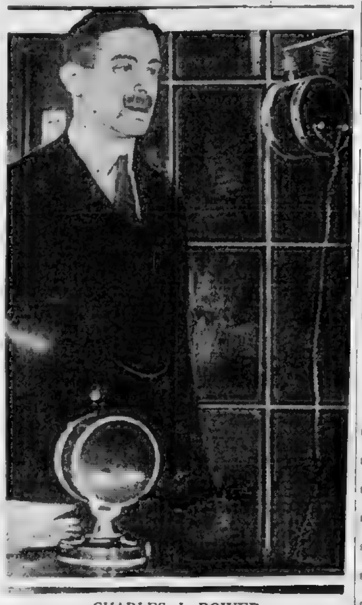
TALKED WITH ENGLAND OVER THE RADIO



CHARLES J. POWER

Mr. Power is showing talking at the transmitter at Medford Hillside, WGI, which sent his voice across the sea to the listening Radio fans in England

Listeners-In

That deep voiced announcer at WGY, Schenectady, had the air announcing a musical program. He broke in on the schedule Thus: "Our next number is especially addressed to a friend in South Boston just because it's you, Dear, by the WGY Orchestra." And all the single [illegible] cutters in my neighborhood squad [illegible] to show they "got it." Wonder if Miss South Boston did, too.

* * *

He was announcing a football game. I know him well. "Both teams are fighting fiercely," he said. "It is a hair-raising game." But please tell me how he knew it was hair-raising. He hasn't had any to raise, not any, for years and years and years.

It really was late, after midnight, and we had no business to be using the loud speaker in our crowded block. But we were interested in trying to hear those British stations and waited up to dodge the one circuit boys that catch them with the squeal. Suddenly Amrad boomed in like a ton of bricks—"Hello England! Hello! England!" Just then some bird upstairs yelled down the airshaft. "Open your windows, and then they'll hear you! Then we can all go to sleep." The earphones were plugged in pronto, or sooner.

Radio Editor—

I feel that you will be interested to know that I was able to pick up the British radio broadcasts.

A few minutes after 10 o'clock station 2LO London was clearly heard, saying that Marconi was to speak, Nov 27.

Station 2LY at Manchester was heard plainly stating that they were using a 385 meter wave and then came "Hello, hello, hello America" several times, followed by, "Are you hearing us over there." A piano number came through well. This was at 10.42 p. m.

Station 5NO at Newcastle was heard. When signing off the words "good night" were repeated three times at 10.46.

One of above also stated that the American stations had been received there the previous night. I also received 2LO Sunday night through heavy static.

HULTMAN WITNESS AT FUEL INQUIRY

Washington, Dec. 4.—Federal Trade Commission citations charging Madeira, Hill & Co., Pennsylvania anthracite producers, and various wholesalers of coal in New York city and Boston with unfair competition in splitting "premiums" on anthracite during 1922 and 1923 were the substance of hearings before the commission.

Francis R. Wadleigh, former Federal fuel distributor, was the first witness summoned, and was followed by Eugene C. Hultman, who served during the two years as fuel administrator in Massachusetts.

SPORTING FRATERNITIES KICKING IN

The sporting element from all over New England is listening to the appeal of the hungry kiddos who are waiting the coming Christmas Day and the big eats. Many of the leading sport organizations have sent in checks to John B. Gillooly, sport editor, and the fund is swelling.

KOZLOWSKY LIKELY TO LEAD EAGLES IN 1924

Captain Charlie Darling has another year at Boston College and although he is mentioned to lead the team another year will give way to Kozlowsky. Darling has been on two champion B. C. elevens and is quite contented and will surely give way to Kozlowsky, his classmate.

BETTING IS EVEN ON BIG BOUT

By JACK CONWAY

Tommy Nee, South Boston bantamweight star, and Abe Friedman, New England bantamweight champion, are eagerly waiting for the sound of the gong which will send them into action in their ten-round bout at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House tonight.

Betting on the contest is at even money. Friedman was originally a 10-to-8 and 10-to-9 choice, but there has been a decided swing to Nee during the past twenty-four hours.

Many of the best judges of ring affairs hereabouts are of the opinion Nee will win. They figure his aggressiveness and heavy punching power will enable him to overcome Friedman's superior science.

The Nee backers are also banking on the fact that Nee is an improved boxer as a result of the coaching he received from Jack Britton while at Freddy Welsh's training camp at Summit, N. J. Nee now has a snappy left hand.

This will be the second time that Friedman and Nee have battled under the flickering calcium. In their first tussle, Friedman won a close decision. Since then Nee has improved as a boxer, as was very evident when he easily outpointed Johnny Sheppard of Lynn recently.

Nee and Friedman both declare they are in the best possible physical condition and as a result neither will be in a position to offer an alibi if defeated.

ALLEN AND RECORD IN THE SEMI FINAL.

Whitey Allen of Hyde Park and Eddie Record of Nashua, N. H., will furnish the thrills in the semi-final of ten rounds. As both boys are heavy hitters, the fans should witness plenty of action

There also will be two eights.

* * *

The Italian A. A. of Lynn will stage an amateur boxing show at Casino Hall, Lynn, on December 19. There will be bouts for novices at 108 and 126 pounds, while the open classes will be at 118 and 147 pounds. Entries close on December 17 with Louis Penney, room 11A, Lee building, City Hall square, Lynn. The Italian A. A. already has staged some very successful shows at Lynn.

* * *

Pat McCarthy, Roxbury light heavyweight, certainly has Johnny Wilson giving ground. Roxbury Pat is prepared to take on the former middleweight champion at any time, but to date Wilson has not accepted McCarthy's challenge. There are many people who believe that the Roxbury Adonis' heavy right hand sock to the jaw would enable him to stop Wilson

As Johnny proved a sensation in his Boston bouts with George Robinson and Pal Reed, one of the greatest crowds to ever turn out to witness a boxing match in Boston would be on hand if the conqueror of Mike O'Dowd were to come out of his shell and consent to stand up before McCarthy's heavy socks.

* * *

Wolf Larsen, like Hambone Kelly, is busy at a local gym. These heavy hitters will be signed to meet at Mechanics Building the latter part of this month.

* * *

Sammy Marco has resumed light training and is prepared to sign to swap blows with any of our brave lightweights. Marco is one of the most promising boxers to ever invade New England

* * *

Harry Foley, Irish Italian feather weight of the North End, has started working at Kelley & Hayes' gym. Foley's eye, which was opened in his last meeting, is thoroughly healed, and Red Stoller is ready to accept any of the various offers. Stoller expects to match Foley with Johnny Drew at Worcester, or Manty at Fall River. Foley is also wanted at Hartford.

CRIMSON PLANS SCHOLASTIC MEET

After several changes in dates, it was definitely announced at the H. A. A. that the first Harvard indoor Interscholastic Track Meet will be held on the afternoon of February 16 in Mechanics Building. Preliminary invitations to compete were sent out to the various high schools of Massachusetts and the preparatory schools of New England, and entry blanks will be mailed within a few weeks. The entering teams will be subdivided into four groups for competition.

LYNCH FLATTENS COULON IN THIRD

Newark, N. J., Dec 4.—Joe Lynch of New York, the world's bantamweight champion, knocked out Eddie Coulon of New Orleans, who had been making quite a reputation in southern boxing circles, in the third round of their scheduled 12-round fight.

The end came after Lynch had put Coulon down for a count of nine. As the Southerner arose, Lynch connected with a right to the jaw. Coulon went flat and stayed there for the full count.

TUFTS QUINTET HAS FIVE VETERANS

A veteran Tufts basketball quintet will face the Conn. Aggies on January 8th at the Goddard gymnasium. Donald Sample, the Jumbo mentor, expects his veteran outfit to open their 1924 season in an auspicious manner.

Jack Wilson

Thirty-five candidates responded to the first call two weeks ago. Among the candidates were five letter men and many stars from last season's freshman team. A schedule of 18 games will be played.

Jack Wilson, veteran guard, has been working out for the past three weeks and he will hold down his regular assignment. Jack is considered one of the best basketball players in college.

Captain George Rogers, star center, has been playing with the Jumbo team for the last three seasons. John Mahoney, Al Evans and Ed Dalson are the other veterans who will face the Aggies. Mahoney and Evans are the backfield combination.

Ed Dalson, a former freshman star, looms up as the leading candidate for the vacant berth. Chris M'nagle is another good prospect, who may win a varsity place before the season is over.

STASIAK IN BIG MAT BOUT AT LAWRENCE

Stanley Stasiak, mighty Polish wrestler, will meet Karl Hockman the German Giant, best two falls in three, in the feature bout at the Radio Theatre tonight. In one of the other bouts Angelo Taramishi, the Italian champion, will be pitted against Dynamite Jack Jordan, the Western Panther.

MEDFORD AND NORWOOD TO BATTLE

Jim Mansfield's Medford high [illegible] football champions w[illegible] with the Norwood high eleven in a post season contest Saturday [illegible] Fulton street grounds, Medford. The players were unanimous in favor of the contest before going to Washington to meet the school champs there.

Coach J. Mansfield is out to keep the [illegible] slate clean and [illegible] for the [illegible] Walter [illegible] Moore [illegible] will be the [illegible] in next Saturday's [illegible]. This four escaped the Malden [illegible] without injuries.

Bud Dowe[illegible] Norwood triple threat [illegible] closely by the fast and powerful Medford team. Capt. Dwyer has been responsible for [illegible] of the scoring [illegible] Norwood aggregation did this season.

Fred Ost[illegible] Bowdoin football [illegible] the Norwood coach. Ost[illegible] will have charge of the Norwood backfield this week. A victory for Norwood would mean a claim for the State schoolboy football championship.

FOUR LETTER EAGLES TO GRADUATE

Boston College will have lost four letter men when the [illegible] season comes around. The regulars who played Saturday, and who graduate in June are Frank Wilson, Ray Duffy and Bill Medley. Leo Hughes and Frank Bransfield, substitute back and center respectively, will also be lost to the Eagles.

Wilson came from B. C. High, and was a whirlwind during the scholastic period of his football career. In the first two years of college, however, he seemed to slow up. His light was greatly dimmed by the over abundance of regular backfield material.

In his junior year, his sign of promise blossomed and he made good. He proved himself the best and fast back that [illegible] was against the Purple and earned his reward by the honor of [illegible] a game against Holy Cross [illegible] his senior year.

HUNTINGTON TO PLAY MIDDLESEX

The management of the Middlesex School nine of Concord is busy booking dates for the 1924 season. Among the recent teams scheduled is Huntington School, which will be played April 16.

AMATEUR STARS TO SHOW WARES FOR DILBOYS

What promises to be a banner attraction in amateur boxing circles will take place in K. of C. Hall, Somerville, Thursday evening, when the Dilboy Post, V. F. W., stages its regular monthly tournament.

Gene Driscoll.

The tournaments staged by this organization have been the talk of the followers of the amateur mitt wielders, and arrangements have been made to handle a capacity crowd.

With competition in the following classes, 112, 118, 135, 147 and 160 pounds and entries received from the cream of each class, those who take in the tourney will witness plenty of action from the opening to the final gong.

In all probability Ray Cross, the boy who has proved a sensation in the 135 pound class will be seen in action in the 147 pound set. Cross has been taking on weight rapidly, and only last week appeared in a nearby tournament in the 147 pound class and captured the honors with ease.

Jack Conway Picks Friedman to Defeat Nee

Jack Conway, holder of the world's record for picking winners, hands out the following "dope" on tonight's Armory A. A. show at the Grand Opera House

"I am picking Abe Friedman to win over Tommy Nee. It will be a hard, close fight with Friedman's speed and skill pitted against Nee's aggressiveness and punching power.

"If Nee has absorbed all of the coaching he recently received from Jack Britton, he may hand our 'dope' a jolt."

Since October 19 Jack has performed the amazing feat of picking 29 winners out of a possible 30. For the year the Boston American's expert has named 145 winners out of a possible 168.

GREB HIMSELF IN BOUT WITH DOWNEY

Pittsburgh, Dec. 4.—Harry Greb successfully defended his world's middleweight title against Bryan Downey of Columbus.

The bout was over the ten round route to a decision. Greb, who was reported to be going back, showed his oldtime "windmill" tactics and speed.

UNION A. A. OF NEW BEDFORD GRILLED

The State Boxing Commission today gave a hearing to the officials of the Union A. A. of New Bedford on charges that the club raised the price of admissions without notifying the commission, that it had not given the full attendance at bouts, thus lessening the money it would have to turn over to the State, and that it had not paid a boxer for his services.

The club officials said they have been conducting the organization only since last August, and that they are not familiar with the State boxing regulations.

Commissioner of Public Safety Alfred F. Foote, in turn, asked John Cantwell, the president, Thomas H. Johnson, the secretary, and Thomas Burke, another officials, if they had read the regulations, and they all replied in the negative.

"You are a fine group of club officials," declared Commissioner Foote. "You appear to be greatly interested in the sport of boxing. You seem to be trying to keep it on a high level, all right."

SCHOOLBOY WONDERS PICKED BY LANE FOR "ALL" ELEVEN

2 PLACES FOR LYNN AND B. C.

By FRED [illegible] LANE

The referee's whistle has blown its last official blast. The pigskin has been packed away with the moleskins, and the time is here for the publication of the Boston American's All-Scholastic team for 1923. The task of picking each year becomes more complicated and difficult, due to general improvement in play and coaching.

This year the writer decided to give all leagues and teams within a radius of 25 miles of Boston consideration. This will answer for the many schools and players that come in for honors.

Each year there seems to be a shortage of players in some one of the eleven positions. This season it is guards. Last year it was tackles.

One chap eligible for a guard position on the American team is Walter Tracey of Waltham High. Tracey, in addition to being one of the best linesmen ever to come under Coach Jack O'Leary, is also a punter of note.

He did all the kicking for Waltham this year and his fame has spread far and wide. Wherever Waltham had an occasion to show their wares, this boy's kicking was considered the feature of the game.

EUSTIS HOOD HAD ALL TACKLES STOPPED

To add further strength to the line Ned Dewing of Newton High is our choice for the other guard position. Newton High's team of 1923 failed to even equal the record of preceding [illegible] yet the work of this player stood out above that of any other guard in the Suburban League.

For tackles, Eustis Hood of Boston College High is one, while Sid Kaplan of Brookline is the other. One [illegible] about Hood.

Coaches whose teams have played B. C. High are still talking about this [illegible]. Fearless, aggressive [illegible] with a fine spirit, the [illegible] star [illegible] whale.

Kaplan has played a consistent game for [illegible] team all season. He was the big stumbling block to Medford and Malden. He [illegible] today in the Newton [illegible] both offensively and defensively [illegible].

[illegible] of Everett and Jack Heffernan of Lynn Classical are the two [illegible] boys [illegible] on the gridiron this fall [illegible] due to their aggressiveness.

PHELAN OF MEDFORD GREAT DROP KICKER

Both are past masters in the art of catching forward passes. Terrio is the better of the two on the defence but is passed by Heffernan as an offensive player. We have tried to balance up the power of our line in both respects, which accounts for our choosing such men.

Phelan of Medford High is our idea of a center. In addition to being a remarkable line player he [illegible] the distinction of being considered the best drop kicker in scholastic circles.

Phelan won football games for Medford High with his toe, when every other course failed. He saved the team from defeat on two occasions with timely boots between the opponent's goal posts. He is not the calibre of Halpin of Malden in passing, but makes up for this delinquency with his offensive power.

The job of selecting four players [illegible] backs is not simple.

John [illegible] Ryan of Lynn Classical is the quarterback. Coaches in the North Shore League officials with long records for deeds on the gridiron while in college proclaim him to be the best field general in the State.

[illegible] says that Ryan is one of the [illegible] quarterbacks ever to come under his jurisdiction. For throwing forward passes he is without a peer. A private exhibition of his work at [illegible] of game was witnessed by the writer who saw the boy toss a pass that carried 75 yards.

In naming Joe Fitzgerald of Boston College High as one of the halfbacks we pick the best punter in scholastic ranks. There have been times when he has failed to measure up with the opposing punters, but for consistent booting he has no equal.

LEXINGTON AND NORWOOD HAD STAR ATHLETES.

[illegible] too, he is a player both offensively and defensively. [illegible] considered the best halfback that B. C. High has had in years. [illegible] of Boston College [illegible] in praise of this lad and predicts a brilliant future for him in college.

In jumping to Lexington for a player we take a big leap, but it's worth while, for Lawrence Gaffney was the scoring ace of the season.

Of the thirty-three touchdowns made by his team, Gaffney has tallied nineteen times. He was the first [illegible] to score on Framingham High in three years. Lexington played a hard schedule this year yet [illegible] experienced little trouble sandwiching through the opposing lines. His broken field running, along with his ability to buck the line caused him to be rated the best prospect ever to wear the colors of Lexington High.

For a wind-up to this yarn we have reserved the best player of the year for our final comment. Francis "Bud" Dower of Norwood High, [illegible] all round player, Dower is by far the best schoolboy uncovered in years.

Norwood has made a great record the past two years and every account of their victories finds Dower as the big star. His name will go down in the history of football at Norwood as one never to be forgotten.

Not a player in the North Shore Suburban or any other league or independent team can measure up to the Norwood star. Dower is [illegible] playing an end position, but by his work this year behind the line of scrimmage has proven himself capable of playing any position. His defensive work has been superb also.

ONE NEW ELEVEN ON R. I. STATE SCHEDULE

Kingston, R. I., Dec. 4.—College of the City of New York will appear on the football schedule of Rhode Island State College in 1924, the game being played in New York. This is the first time that Rhode Island has arranged a game with C. C. N. Y., and this game will take the place of the game formerly arranged with New York University. Other teams appearing on the new schedule are: University of Maine at Kingston, New Hampshire State at Kingston, Lowell Textile at Lowell, Connecticut State at Storrs, and Worcester Polytech at Kingston.

STOUT NEW TIGER FOOTBALL CAPTAIN

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 4.—Edmund [illegible] Stout of East Orange, N. J., end on the Princeton varsity football team for two years, was elected captain of the Tiger eleven for 1924. The selection took place at a meeting of the letter men of this year's team.

As one of the outstanding members of the Princeton eleven for the last two years, Stout has received favorable mention by many sport writers for all Eastern honors.

HOLY CROSS TO BUILD NEW STADIUM

Worcester, Dec. 4.—A football stadium to seat 30,000 and to cost about $300,000 is planned by Holy Cross College, according to President James J. Carlin, S. J., as a result of the great interest shown in recent years in the annual Boston College and Holy Cross game.

According to Fr. Carlin, the new stadium proposition will be brought up at the next session of the athletic council directly after Christmas. A new baseball plant is scheduled to be built in the Spring, but because of the great strides made in football it is felt that a new stadium is needed [illegible].

With a football plant such as is planned, [illegible] will be possible to bring to Worcester teams like Lafayette who have asked for places on the Holy Cross football schedule, but have been turned down because of the impossibility of taking care of the guarantee which they demand, through the limited capacity of the present field.

COVINGTON NAMED CAPTAIN AT CENTRE

Danville, Ky., Dec. 4.—Herbert Covington of Mayfield, Ky., was elected captain of the Centre football team for 1924 by a unanimous vote of his team mates. Recognized as one of the South's greatest all-time broken field runners, Covington has been Centre's chief gridiron scorer the last two years and during that time won places on the All-Southern mythical eleven as quarterback.

"Y" LIFE SAVERS AFTER TITLE AGAIN

The Boston Y. M. C. A. life saving corps, which has captured the local championship for the past two years, is going after the honor again on the night of Dec. 8 in the big "Y" pool, at the Metropolitan Red Cross competition.

BIG SQUAD OUT AT ARLINGTON

The initial call for candidates for Arlington High basketball brought out 35 aspirants. Arlington will not play in any league.

GARDNER SURE HE WILL DOWN ALBRIGHT

Pinky Gardner

He is especially anxious to meet Angelo Taramaschi, the Italian star. In his match at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night he is matched with Pinky Gardner, one of the greatest heavy middleweights that the world ever saw and now that he has become heavier he is just as phenomenal.

This match, which is to a positive finish will bring out a large delegation of the fans who want real clean cut wrestling between two of the cleverest men in the game today.

In the other bout of the double star card, Angelo Taramaschi, the Italian champion, will meet Charlie Platos, the Greek terror. Platos is about the toughest customer the Italian Flash has ever tackled as he has beaten a lot of good men in his western engagements.

In addition to this he is something of a roughhouse artist and has been known to make a lot of grapplers quit before they were actually beaten. His Greek friends around Boston figure him the right man to take the measure of Taramaschi.

HARVARD OUT FOR BIG 3 ICE TITLE

Harvard has opened [illegible] practice, first day work in the Arena pointing toward [illegible] with the [illegible] Friday night.

[illegible] veterans [illegible] started with Captain [illegible] and Jack Hammond the stars. The greatest problem facing the Harvard mentor is to develop a goal. Realizing the need of expert coaching Winsor has engaged Jack Wylde, former Harvard goal tender, and George W. "Skeets" Canterbury, B. A. A. coach to assist him in developing a man to fill the net position.

Jack Hammond

Friday's encounter should be a bang-up battle, despite relative inexperience of both teams as far as practice is concerned. Harvard is considered favorite, although the [illegible] club with the [illegible] George Owen in the lineup can be depended upon to do the unexpected.

The Crimson [illegible] schedule has been announced. For the first time Harvard will play a two out of three game series with Toronto, previous encounters being limited to a single game. McGill and Hamilton are the newcomers.

Loughran Will Meet Todd

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Roland Todd, welterweight champion of England and Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia, will meet in the 12-round semi-final to the Tunney-Greb fight at Madison Square Garden, Monday night.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Hopes, rather than conclusions, are being formed concerning him. Business men I've talked with here believe that Calvin Coolidge will slowly capture the imagination of the American public, or at least the thinking majority.

They declare that he improves on closer acquaintance; that he is a doer rather than a talker; that he is solid rather than showy. Some of them have been astonished by his grasp of economics.

Radicals doubtless will find in it passages which will serve as targets for condemnation. But, from what one gathers, the message will do something to modify rather than intensify the criticism, that President Coolidge is a "reactionary."

Among friends of the Administration there is frankly more fear that President Coolidge may not go far enough to meet present-day progressive ideas than that he will be swept too far along dangerous paths.

Curiously enough, as I finished writing that last sentence a message came that President Coolidge had made an appointment to see me just before lunch.

* * *

He can smile. He doesn't chronically wear that dour, stern, unmelting New England countenance the newspapers have told us so much about.

"Mr. Coolidge is a very human man and he has two of the finest lads you ever met. I have known all the Presidents for many years, and I tell you that Mr. Coolidge is as good a man as the best of them. He stayed at this house as Vice-President and as President. The big job didn't go to his head and it didn't go to the heads of his boys, either. Of course, Mr. Coolidge doesn't go in for dancing, and he's not strong on your swell dinners or on gadding around. But there are enough other people to go in for that sort of thing. He believes in attending to his business without any fuss. It's a good thing for the country to have a sensible man like him in the White House."

* * *

President Coolidge expressed interest in the facts concerning agricultural and business conditions, I found, and in the impressions I formed during my recent trip across the continent. I found him particularly concerned over the unfavorable phases of the agricultural situation, including low prices for live stock. I was glad to be able to assure him that it was widely recognized that the war finance corporation had really got down to brass tacks and had been able to extend practical assistance in many sections.

* * *

President Coolidge has often been pictured as a stand-patter. His talk to me was along exactly the opposite direction as he comes out of his shell. I rather think the country will conclude that he is keenly alive to the fact that "the world does move."

If President Coolidge is well advised he should, now that he has got his momentous first message to Congress out of the way, get away from the White House once in a while and give the American people a chance to become acquainted with him. By so doing he could do something to dispel the delusion that he is icy. The people take more to the President than they've taken to his picture.

* * *

On leaving I smilingly told the President that I was extremely glad to have had the privilege of a chat with him, because I could always write better about a man whom I had met, and I added, too, that I expected that there would be occasion to write a good deal about him, not only during the year, but during the next five years. He parried the point with delightful modesty.

At that, anyone who imagines that Calvin Coolidge is likely to efface himself from the picture between now and next November is likely to be mistaken.

PENNSYLVANIA 10,000-SHARE BLOCK SOLD

Irregularly higher prices characterized the opening of today's New York stock market. U. S. Steel and Baldwin opened fractionally higher, as did a number of other ordinarily active industrials.

Sale of a block of 10,000 shares of Pennsylvania railroad at 41, last night's closing price, was the feature of the early dealings, the stock later advancing to 42⅛. Union Pacific was again heavy.

Davison Chemical broke 3 points and American Sumatra Tobacco, Marine preferred, Lackawanna Railroad and Gulf States Steel 1¾ to 2¼. Baldwin, Studebaker and American Can sold a point below yesterday's final figures.

HALF OF LOSSES IN RAILS AND INDUSTRIALS REGAINED

Copyright, 1923, By Cosmopolitan News Service.

The forward swing in stock prices since early in November has been of sufficient volume to make good about half the losses in the industrials since June and nearly half the decline in the rails in the same period.

If the present upward movement eventually develops into a sustained rise in prices of speculative securities, as many Wall street commentators believe, it will date its inception from the end of the confusion in the oil industry, the inauguration of higher and special dividends by a number of prominent industrial companies and the beginning of a period of political and legislative uncertainty.

Industrial factors for the next six months and the sold out condition of the market will therefore be considered more potent than the influences which make for lower prices.

Since March 29 the average price of the twenty industrial stocks in the Cosmopolitan News Service compilations has moved down from 95.45 to 76.20 and rallied to 84.47 on a level with July price records; the twenty rails have been more narrow in their movements, declining from 65.30 to 57.10 and recovering to 61.46. The following comparisons will indicate precisely the trend of stock prices since March:

	Rails High	Rails Low	Industrials High	Industrials Low
Mar (clos. Mar. 29)	65.30		95.45
June	64.66	58.36	88.57	77.26
July	61.66	57.10	83.70	77.50
August	60.34	57.28	84.63	77.82
September	61.18	58.03	84.97	78.[illegible]
November	61.46	59.[illegible]	84.47	79.04

The figures show that the rails did not participate either in the decline or the recovery as largely as the industrials, their extreme movements being about eight points, and this in spite of the fact that extreme reactions of from 12 to 26 points were sustained by some of the active rails.

BUYING POWER OF DOLLAR UP

Professor Fisher's weekly index for the week ended November 30 is 151. This index shows the average movement, from week to week (1) of the wholesale prices of 209 representative commodities and (2) of the purchasing power of money. Both are relative to the pre-war year 1913 (Thus the peak prices in May, 1920, exceed pre-war prices, on the average, by 147 per cent, i. e., a dollar was worth 40.5 pre-war cents.)

INCOME TAXES BRING QUEER SITUATION

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

Writers of stock brokers' letters are still telling us about the "tax selling" we are likely to see this month, at the same time admitting that there has already been a good deal of selling to establish losses against income tax payments.

Under the law he who sells a stock at a loss is not allowed to claim the loss if he buys back again within thirty days after the sale.

Undoubtedly thirty days have already elapsed, or will have elapsed, between now and the month's end, since the sale of many stocks for taxation purposes, so that it seems reasonable to expect that from now on we will see quite as much of what may be called "tax buying" as of "tax selling."

ELECTION YEARS.

Presidential election years are popularly supposed to be apt to bring declining prices in the stock market. Perhaps the average person gets this idea from the fact that he knows the market dreads uncertainties. But the idea is wrong, as shown by the following table showing the course of stock averages in so-called presidential years.

FLOOD OF MORTGAGES.

Serious loss faces the American investor if the indiscriminate issuance and sale of real estate mortgages and investment bonds secured by them is permitted to continue unchecked, according to President Richard M. Hurd of the Lawyers Mortgage Company.

Mr. Hurd deprecates the issuance of high interest bearing mortgage bonds by companies organized chiefly from "the selling end" and which offer a tempting income return far above the ability of the property on which they are based. These securities seldom bear the guarantee of a responsible and financially powerful institution.

Wall St. Gossip

HAYES WHEEL November gross sales were 1,661,000, against $1,194,000 in November, 1922, and $1,535,000 in October.

EXPECTATIONS are that Royal Dutch Shell combine will make better showing on this year's operation than last, despite slump.

NUMBER of General Motors employes on Oct. 21 for first time exceeded 100,000. This compares [illegible] in October, 1922, and 49,125 in October, 1921.

PLANS FOR $15,000,000 new financing for Maryland Oil have been abandoned because of improvement in the oil industry.

VICE-PRESIDENT WILD of Denver & Rio Grande Western, in charge of traffic, says revenues this year will exceed those of 1922, by $1,250,000.

WITH NO appreciable change in the business situation the money market remains in much the same condition as for the past five weeks.

BORROWING demand is well sustained, and the big banks are consequently in the Federal Reserve System for rediscounting the greater part of the time of late.

IN NEW YORK time money is 5 per cent. for short and 5¼ per cent. for long dates.

TIRE STOCKS have been stronger, reflecting buying on the theory that bottom has been reached and from now on tendency will be upward.

DOME MINES, Ltd., November output was valued at $381,540, against $390,539 in October, $393,599 in September, and $353,495 in November, 1922.

BOND TREND OBSCURED

To L. K. E., Chestnut Hill—Major upward trend in the bond market appears to have been materially obscured by the many cross-currents in various groups. This was apparently due to the great diversity of influences to which bond prices are subjected.

While is it indisputable that bond values are primarily governed by the trend of time money and commercial paper rates it should be noted that high grade obligations, whose rating is unaffected by earning power, are first to benefit from any relaxing tendency in monetary conditions.

On the other hand, securities of the semi-investment type, such as bonds whose security fluctuates with the change in the economic tide, will chiefly follow the movements in their allied stocks, considering the future money situation of secondary importance.

Thus while gilt-edged bonds have risen steadily for the past two months, in response to easier money, due to the flowing back of idle commercial capital into investment channels, many of the lower grade issues have dropped, influenced by the very slackening of trade conditions affecting the other group favorably. This explains the depression in the bonds of the copper, chemical, rubber, tire and especially the oil companies.

Most issues of the latter are selling today at the highest yield basis for the year, ranging from 6 per cent. to more than 11 per cent. due to the extensive price declines they suffered.

It is doubtful whether any other bond group has lost so much ground in recent months. Many brokers declare that some of the better grade oil bonds, which are reasonably well entrenched from an investment point of view and have reached a yield basis substantially "out of line" from the standpoint of credit in general, might well prove highly attractive speculative medium for the long pull.

TOO MUCH RISK.

To O. M. C., Weston—Although the stock you contemplate buying should have all the advance it is reasonable to expect for it, the risk you would be called upon to assume would be out of proportion to the gains which now seem to you to be probable. Don't take long chances. Sane investment is what builds up a fortune in the long run. For every one who "gets rich quick" thousands go to ruin.

BE SURE YOU'RE RIGHT.

To U. S. Q., Salem—If you can build a satisfactory residence as cheaply as you say, it would undoubtedly be better for you to do so than to continue to pay rent at the figure you now are called upon to give up. But are you sure of your figures? Better have a lawyer of standing in your city look at the contract with the builder before you pay over any money.

CENTRAL LEATHER.

To R. S. S., Holyoke—It isn't very difficult to determine the cause for Central Leather's recent sinking spell. It was brought about by the publishing of the company's earnings for the third quarter, ended September 30. This showed the surprising loss of $3,324,034. The deficit in the June quarter was $79,637. This utterly wipes out the net income of $1,490,977 in the March quarter. How much longer this company can keep on its feet is something that will be an interesting development of the future.

HOLD YOUR STOCK.

To F. W. K., Somerset street—We shall advise you to hold your Crescent Pipe Line stock for better prices. This isn't a good time to sell any of the Standard Oil subsidiaries. They are too much depressed. Better prices will come later on.

If you are thinking of buying a Columbia Graphophone 8 per cent. bond, you would better think twice. We should have nothing whatever to do with it. It is very far from being a "safe investment."

If you will tell us in another letter how much money you have available for investment we will undertake to advise you how to place it to the best possible advantage consistent with safety.

N. J. STANDARD.

To M. T. K., Kingston street—From one way of looking at it, Standard Oil of New Jersey common stock is unsuitable for the small investor, yet over a long period this stock has proved a most profitable investment. Its defects from an investment viewpoint are these: The stock returns only a little more than 3 per cent. at current prices and gilt-edged bonds may be obtained to bring a much higher return. It is subject to price fluctuations as business conditions vary, and the small investor unable to assume these risks is likely to be forced into a loss. On the other hand, large stock dividends have been paid in the past and investors who bought the stock years ago have a handsome profit.

It is reasonable to suppose that such developments will be repeated at some future date, for the price of the stock indicates that holders are willing to forego present returns in hope of favorable distributions later, and in this phase there is an element of speculation. If an investor is in a position to accept a low current return and is willing to hold the stock for a long period it is likely to prove a good investment, but not all investors can afford to do this. The preferred stock is a good investment and lacks these speculative features.

PUBLIC UTILITIES.

To R. C. T., Mascoma street—No one knows whether representative copper shares will be selling higher a year from date, but it is not unlikely that they will. Both public utility companies you mention are well regarded in their respective communities and the stocks are suitable for a business man's investment. Consolidated Gas through subsidiaries is interested in the distribution of electricity, and Laclede Gas Light does some electricity business.

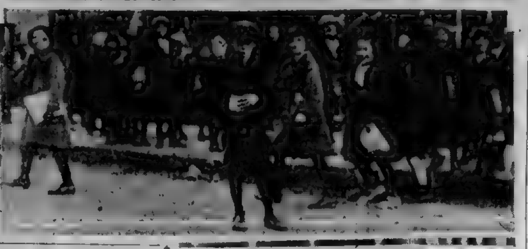
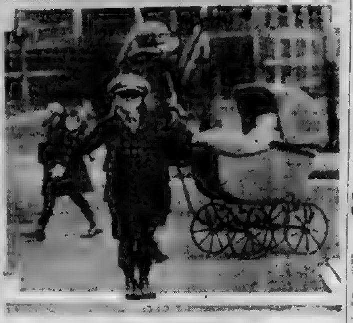
PUPILS DO TRAFFIC DUTY NEAR SCHOOL





GUARD CHILDREN

Pupils of St. Raphael's School, Oak street and Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park, are doing traffic duty in front of the school during rush hours, that is, when pupils are going to and returning from school. Robert Armour and Philip Maguire, (at top), pupils of the school, are here shown successfully directing traffic in front of the school.

DEAN OPPOSES RAILWAY FARE INCREASES

Arguments in opposition to the 20 per cent. increase in commutation and 12-ride ticket rates requested by the railroads were filed at the State House with the Public Utilities Commission by former Senator Charles A. Dean, chairman of the Commuters' Protest Committee of Greater Boston.

C. A. Dean

"The Boston & Maine," Mr. Dean says, "reports that on August 30, 1920, there was a 20 per cent. increase in all passenger rates. Gerritt Fort, vice-president of the railroad, in his brief filed in advocacy of another 20 per cent. increase, presents to your board travel and revenue since the last increase, which show: "The loss in single ticket passenger miles was 103,826,000; the loss in 25-mile family ticket passenger miles was 6,277,000, and the loss in 12 ride and commutation ticket passenger miles was 19,000,000, a total loss in passenger miles of 129,000,009.

OPPOSES INCREASE.

"They show a slight gain on 12-ride revenue, of $129,000, but a loss on all totals of revenue of $1,500,000. This evidence of the Boston & Maine loss can only be accelerated by another increase of 20 per cent. on fares. It is conclusive that for the railroads' good this increase should be dismissed.

"The case presented by the Boston & Maine clearly proves that you cannot help by increasing fares; in fact, it spells loss.

"More than all this your commission was not given all the facts in the New Haven presentation. They gave the increase in 12-ride passenger miles as over 45,000,000, from which they elobated at great length and repeated that this ticket had absorbed the losses in the single ticket at heavy loss to the road. Neither the mileage nor the deduction were fa[illegible]

WRONGFUL CLAIMS.

"The Boston & Albany does not need the increase. The Boston & Maine proves that they cannot gain by the increase; the New Haven asks for it under a statement so erroneous as to constitute a wrong to your board and to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, whom you represent. There is but one answer the administration of Massachusetts should make in all honor and justice. The petition for a 20 per cent. increase should not be approved."

B. & M. MEN SHARE IN U. S. WAGE AWARD

Chicago, Dec. 4—Increase in wages totalling approximately $628,429.00 were awarded to track foremen, track laborers and other employes represented by the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes and railway shop laborers and the Brotherhood of Railway Stations Employes in a decision announced by the United States Railroad Labor Board.

The increases range from one to two cents an hour, and, according to statisticians of the board, effect approximately 22,612 employes of seven railroads. The companies affected include the Boston & Maine Railroad.

"CARUSO SQUARE" FAVORED BY MAYOR

A suggestion that one of the public squares be named after the late Enrico Caruso, the famous tenor, has been made to the Mayor by Michael B. Nazzaro of No. 146 Metropolitan avenue, Roslindale.

It has been favorably received and is to be immediately referred to the street commissioners for action.

4 TRAFFIC BOYS GUARD STREETS IN HYDE PARK

"Hey! Come back here! Come back here! Stand on the sidewalk till I give you the signal to cross. If you don't care nothin' for [illegible] own life, you'd better take care of it for your folks' sake!"

Thus spoke seven-year-old Cyril Bassett, traffic officer of St. Raphael's Parochial School, on Oak street, Hyde Park, avenue to little Johnnie Kilduff, who was about to dart across Hyde Park avenue in the path of a swiftly oncoming auto[illegible]

"Now go! Get a move on you! Don't stand there in the middle of the street like a lot of geese! Run! Run!"

Over at the corner of Oak and Maple streets Louis Cyr and Robert Armour were going through the same performance, endeavoring to inculcate caution and some of their own alert spirit into their slower thinking and slower acting [illegible] mates in the second grade of the school.

These four boys have been regularly appointed and duly authorized as traffic officers for the grade by the good sisters who preside over the school. Alarmed over the increasing number of accidents to children—three were knocked down by automobiles in Hyde Park last week—it was decided to select four smart boys to watch these busy corners twice daily, when the children are leaving the class rooms en masse after the morning and afternoon dismissals. Other bright boys will take turns at traffic duty until the term ends next June. By that time, the sisters expect, the children will have learned the lesson of caution, and when school opens in September a new class will receive instruction.

"Gee, ma, you otta hear me bawl out them dumbheads, 'n' everything," said Cyril proudly, when he reached home after his first "tour of duty."

December 19—New England States. December 21—Local points.

FR. CORRIGAN'S OVERCOAT STOLEN

While he was delivering a lecture in the lecture hall at the Public Library, some sneak thief stole the gray overcoat of the Rev. Jones I. J. Corrigan, S. J., of Boston College from the ante-room.

RARE SHILLING UNEARTHED IN OLD VAULT

ANCIENT SHILLING

A shilling of the reign of Queen Elizabeth and 1,000 shares of Cripple Creek gold mining stock, found in an old vault during the rebuilding of the new Filene's men's store at No. 400 Washington street, has created a perplexing problem for the firm of William Filene's Sons Company, which their lost and found department has not solved as yet.

A porter found the coin and the shares in two separate envelopes while he was tearing out the interior of the building prior to rebuilding.

That the coin is evidently rare and of great value is testified by a notation, "Refused $350 for this coin," and another, "Loaned to the Museum for exhibition purposes."

The shilling bears the date 1585. The head of Queen Elizabeth is engraved on one of its sides. In the envelope containing the shares there was a note declaring it belonged to Oliver Todd.

Several names and addresses and a statment that the coin was found in 1871 in Cambridge, 11 feet underground, were also scribbled on the envelopes. So far careful investigation has failed to find the slightest trace of the Todds or their descend[illegible]

If eventually no owner can be found it is believed the finder will be given the objects. The store was formerly occupied by the Maculler Parker Company.

MEN'S FURNISHINGS SHOWN ATTRACTIVELY

The most modern and efficient methods in displaying and selling men's furnishings are embodied in the new men's shop which the Continental Clothing House has established at its store at Franklin and Washington streets.

The opening of the new men's store is part of the celebration of the golden anniversary of the Continental company.

During the fifty years that the Continental has been in business in Boston men's furnishings have always been a leading feature. Now, however, even larger stocks of shirts, neckwear, hosiery, underwear, and the one hundred and one things which mere man finds essential to his welfare, have been laid in. There is not one article of men's wear in the scores of different styles that are now in vogue than can not be found at the new men's store.

By act of 1901, the schoolhouse department of the city of Boston was established with three salaried commissioners.

I Am the Voice of the World

And I Shall Move the World as It Has Not Been Moved Since the Beginning

I am the mighty voice of the Universe.

Listen and learn of my power. My growth will astound you.

But a short time ago I was like the first howl of the new born child, inarticulate and forbidding.

Today I am but in my swaddling clothes.

Yet the world attunes its ear to my music and its mind to my knowledge.

For I am Education. I am Information. I am Edification and I travel with a speed that is greater than Sound, greater than Lightning.

I travel with the speed of Light.

I snatch sound up, place her upon my back and race so far ahead of her to any goal that were Sound to follow she would be mistaken for Echo.

I race to all goals at once. I can circle the earth and greet your ears as you hear the sound itself.

I know no obstacles. I penetrate all of the elements. The walls and ambuscades of man may not keep me out.

I carry news of sunshine and storm to the toiler of the field ahead of the elements that might destroy his yield.

I comfort the shut in, the sick, the stricken with the music, the story and the news of all the world. I am the visitor, eager, pleasant and smiling, to those the world may shun.

I am the precurser of Universal Faith in God. For I abolish prejudice of religious cult and caste. I make men to respect their fellow worshippers of any creed that has for its foundation the desire to know and fear God. For I bring Understanding to dissolve the Prejudgment of Ignorance.

I shall unite the peoples of the earth.

For I bear tidings of a universal language.

My beginning is the language of music.

Yet I shall tear down the barriers of nationality for I shall create the Desire for Universal Understanding of the Knowledge I have to convey. I shall enter all homes instantly.

My first great deed was the saving of lives on ships lost at sea. But for every one of those I shall save thousands, yea, tens of thousands of lives lost in the sea of the Eternal Struggle to Live.

I shall carry accountings of the stewardships of your public servants into your homes. I shall carry the voices of your great teachers, your singers, your workers and make each of them a familiar homely visitor.

I shall awaken hope in prisons and in hospitals.

Unseen, unheard, I have the power to destroy fleets, and armies. I start and stop fog sirens. I move machinery.

I carry prescriptions that save lives in remote places. I carry comfort to explorers.

Some day I may bring to you the wisdom of other worlds, knowledge that may revolutionize industry, transportation, and the foundation of life itself.

For I am Radio.

Clear the Air

Obstructionists May as Well Make It Easy for the Growing Radio Army Will Have Its Way

The Boston American takes pleasure in informing its readers who have signed the petitions to President Coolidge calling for a reform in radio regulations that the President has taken cognizance of the need for speedy relief.

Thousands of petitions have been forwarded from Boston where the move originated and the program has taken hold in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, Atlanta, Seattle, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Rochester, Syracuse, Washington, Fort Worth, Baltimore, every place where Mr. Hearst has newspapers.

The sole objection made is that ships might find it necessary to call for help. Any radio fan knows that it is no hardship for the United Fruit Company ships to notify the local station that they have bananas on a wave higher than 700 meters. If a ship is in distress it should call for help on all or any wave lengths and probably will. But ships seldom have to call for help. Messages regarding clearance, docking and the mere detail of shipping may and should be sent upon a higher wave length.

They will be. Radio broadcasting is a force that is growing so rapidly that it will brook no interference. It is not a jazz record but a great education. It has beaten the newspaper by the speed with which it carries essentials of business to the farmer and the worker of far away points and, by the versatility of its education and its recreation. Yet the Boston American will do everything within reason to further this great force. We will still exist, for the newspaper is a permanent record.

After the spark fiends who sit on the keys to rag a harassed public get a taste of the discipline that is coming swiftly and surely to them, it will be time to educate and eradicate the regenerative nuisance.

Regeneration also must go. It is one great cause of fading. Those who deny this statement will have a hard time to prove it. The writer can make a regenerative set fade out a broadcast. Every regenerative set should be preceded by at least one stage of radio frequency.

If you are a business man, you may want insurance—

1—To have some security for the payment of the debt you contracted or need to contract to get the business started again after a slump, or to build an extension to your shop or store

2—To save your business for yourself, if you are a member of a firm, by insuring your partner in your interest, so that if he dies first, there will be cash in hand to buy out his share without liquidating the business.

3—To insure your employes so that they will feel more kindly toward you, and help make your business a success.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

No Attention Paid to Anonymous Communications

Alien Nationalities

Editor Boston American.

An atlas recently issued by an American publisher has this to say about Britain: "Britain is 'home' to many millions of people scattered over the face of the globe. Her sons have carved out new homes for themselves in distant lands, but the ties of blood still bind and when the existence of the homeland is threatened by the foes of democracy, the sons of the Britain rush unbidden from the ends of the world to fight for the struggling motherland."

This same atlas says this about the United States: "Although Columbus discovered the new continent in the fifteenth century, no definite European settlement was attempted until the last quarter of the sixteenth century, when determined efforts were made by the leading maritime powers of western Europe to turn to account the potential wealth of the newly discovered land. Of these enterprising nations, the English secured a paramount influence, through their natural aptitude for colonization." Of the war of independence, it says that the "conflict was not merely a victory for American arms, but it was a still greater victory for the deep-rooted ideals of democracy which were sacred to the British people on both sides of the Atlantic."

And still we hear talk of "nationalities which are not easily assimilated."

Woman of Eighty Appeals

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a woman eighty years old and am wondering if you would help me and my daughter. My daughter would like clothes for a new baby and also clothes for a boy a year and a half old. Any underclothes for a woman, about size 42 or 44. We need shoes, size 3 and size 4. Also man's shoes, size 7.

MRS. E. A. S.

Aid Asked For Destitute Family

Editor Helping Hand:

I answered an appeal for help through your column quite a while ago and found the family very badly off. I have done what I could for them in the line of clothes. But they need a lot.

Teh father is an invalid and should be in the hospital but they see no way to get him there. He has sleeping sickness and is but a young man that never drank or smoked in his life. They have had six children but only two lived to grow up. The boy is 13 years and the girl nine years. They live in a tiny shack in the woods. The mother leaves at 6:30 a. m. for the city to work and returns at 6 p. m. to get supper, do housework and put up the children's lunches for the day after. Her husband need her constant care but she must earn something to buy food and medicine They have no fuel. They are very nice people and so much appreciate the little I have done for them. The mother's health is poor and she should stay home for a rest. The doctor says she is all run down by steady grind for three years.

Can any one help them any as I am sure they are worthy. I think they should have State aid and the father should be in a hospital.

MRS. D S.

Wishes Bed and Bed Clothing

Editor Helping Hand:

I am writing you these few lines asking you if you know if any of your readers has a small bed for a child two years old and some bed clothing, as I am very badly in need of one as I have four small children and have not enough room for them all. I have two girls, two and six and a half years old, who are very badly in need of clothes. The little girl has hardly anything to attend school with, and I do hope you know of some one that can help us out. I find it very hard to get along when the children are so young and my husband is out of work and has been for some time, as he has been laid up with rheumatism. Hoping to hear from some kind friend.

ALL GOES FOR FOOD

All contributors to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund may be sure that every cent submitted goes to pay for food only. Investigation of needy applicants, transportation, clerical work and all other expenses are paid for by the Boston American. The Helping Hand editor urges his generous friends and their friends to send in contributions at once and make them as large as their ever-ready pocket books will stand. We must make a new record this year. See details on another page.

Service Man's Wife Asks Help

Editor Helping Hand:

I am writing to ask you if you can help me. I am the mother of two small children. The oldest is a boy 3½ years old, and the youngest is a little baby girl nine months old, and I expect another one in March. I need some things for the new baby, and I would gladly appreciate anything for the other two children. My husband is an ex-service man, and he earns very small pay. Anything would gladly be appreciated.

MRS. A. L.

Editor Helping Hand.

As I am a widow with two little boys, four and six years old, I am not able to work and, as I live with my mother, it is quite hard for me to get along. I saw by the paper the good work you were doing for the needy, and I thought some kind reader would help me. I wear size 28, and my mother wears size 42, and the children need things quite badly. Hoping some kind person will help us.

MRS. H. S.

Other Offers

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON GREAT CRADLE OF THE MAMMALS

By Garrett P. Serviss

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

No recent discoveries bearing upon evolution exceed in interest and importance those made by explorers of the American Museum of Natural History in central Asia. Nobody who wishes to possess the information necessary for forming an opinion on the great problems of the origin, distribution and development of animal life on this globe—including human life—can afford to go without some knowledge of the results of these epochal explorations.

The collections made by the explorers are assembled in China, and forwarded to New York as rapidly as circumstances allow. They will make our great museum in Central Park West more than ever a focus of attraction for all the world's students of evolution.

Here will be the original exhibits, the type specimens, on the study of which new and momentous conclusions about the relationships of the great class of mammals, the mother-animals, may be based. Motherhood in its true sense belongs only to the mammals, i. e., those animals, including dogs, horses, lions, tigers, whales, monkeys and men, who pass through an infancy stage, during which they are nourished by the milk of their mothers.

Mammal Remains

It is especially the mammal remains which have been discovered that give its great distinction to this exploration conducted by New World scientists in the heart of the oldest, or at any rate the largest, continent of the Old World The discoveries, although they comprise entirely new species of mammals, include some which are closely related to European and American species.

The American relationships are particularly significant, since, as Professor Osborn points out, they furnish fresh evidence of the former existence of a land-bridge between Asia and America. This seems to imply that the original home of the mammals was Asia, and that America has always been a continent depending upon immigration, even from ages long anterior to a similar conclusion. This whole question of biogenetic centres, where alone life, or great organic types, may be assumed to have originated before spreading to other parts of the globe, calls for a great deal of evidence other than of the speculative or deductive kind. Long continued exploration extended over all continents is required to finally settle it

One extinct Mongolian carnivore Hayenodon appears to have ranged over Europe, Asia, Africa and North America."

It seems but common sense in such a case to affirm that the animal in question probably originated in one of the continents named and spread thence to the others. Yet that conclusion involves an antecedent assumption that there was in the whole world but one point where the biological conditions and environment were suitable for the origination of that particular animal, notwithstanding the proven fact that its organism was suited to live practically anywhere on the globe.

Find Confirmation

Of course the chief interest underlying such problems is, for the public mind at any rate, their bearing upon the question of human origins, and the distribution of our species of mammals over the earth, around its whole girth, and almost from pole to pole.

Those who believe in the Bible story of man's creation and dispersion is, at least broadly and in substance, correct, will naturally find confirmation for such belief in any evidence gathered by scientific exploration that tends to make Asia appear as the original home of the mammals If they give up the claim of literal accuracy for the Bible narrative, they will still be able to say: "Well, anyhow, the Mosaic account of the location of the Garden of Eden is not very discordant with that of the latest science."

Only the discovery of an America "Adam" could seriously upset their equanimity

The museum authorities interestingly affirm that the new discoveries "may disprove or modify some of our favorite theories and will remove others from the realm of hypothesis to that of proved conclusions," and that they "lift the veil from a continent (Asia) which has hitherto been a terra incognita to the palaeontologist."

HEROINES OF HISTORY

ENGLISH WOMAN WHO RULED A QUEEN

By Mark Stuyvesant

"She is the victim of three furies—sordid avarice, disdainful pride and ungovernable rage."

After nearly two centuries this terrific arraignment by no less a personage than Swift is quoted when the name of Sarah Jennings, the Duchess of Marlboro, is mentioned

Yet other contemporaries of this woman, a politician at the English court whose methods were oddly like those of the present day feminine party worker, left to posterity many a tale of her charm of personality of her reliability and her extraordinary mental brilliance.

The great outstanding action of her life was renunciation of the power and place she had won for herself that she might become an exile from her beloved native land, obscure and lonely, for love of her husband.

When a mere child Sarah Jennings was a playfellow of the Princess Anne, who afterward became queen. She married clandestinely the handsome Colonel John Churchill, a favorite of the Duke of York, and who became famous later as the Duke of Marlborough. It was a romantic match and an impulsive one. Both Churchill and his bride were poor, and without the assistance which the Duchess of York immediately offered they would have found difficulty in getting on.

Sarah Jennings was appointed to a place of trust in the household of the Duchess of York. She then became a lady in waiting upon Anne, who treated her as an equal. Warm friendship developed, though they were utterly unlike. Anne was phlegmatic, easy and gentle, fond of ceremony and averse to mental exertion. Sarah was resolute, bold, inclined to violence and haughty. She had a powerful will and soon gained ascendancy over the queen.

Finally, however, the influence of the Duchess was broken and a poverty-stricken kinswoman of hers, Abigail Hill, won the queen's favor in her place.

It was then that the duchess resigned all her positions at court and followed her husband abroad where they remained until Queen Anne's death. George I. restored Marlborough to his command, but he never regained his political influence

One son and four daughters, who inherited her beauty, were born to the duchess. She outlived her husband twenty three years and her great wealth brought her many suitors. She died in 1744 at the age of eighty-four.

Despite the romantic experiences which came, one after the other, to make her life colorful, the reputation of the Duchess of Marlborough remained unsullied.

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

SAVING FOOD FOR OTHERS

By Temple Manning

Those who have been accustomed to think of the Arctic as a wilderness of never-ending snow and ice should revise their ideas of some sections of the far north.

During certain seasons of the year in the neighborhood of Baffin Land, to take but one example, there are many birds and animals, flowers and insects. Indeed, the mosquitoes sometimes are so numerous that men have died from their stings and even bears have succumbed.

All too often there comes a time when there is no food for anyone. A storm that makes it impossible for the hunters to go out for days sometimes depletes the supply of food, or perhaps there are no animals, birds, fish or other foods to be had and famine stalks through the village.

A little food at last is found—perhaps a hunter returns with two seals when a score are needed—and there arises the question of who shall eat. Not one of the old people of the village is in sight to stare at the food with pleading eyes. The reason is because all the old people are in their houses awaiting death. For when it comes to a question of superfluous mouths to feed, the old people voluntarily retire to their homes and willingly starve to death so the others may live.

STELLA DALLAS By Olive Higgins Prouty

New and Intensely Interesting Serial of a Marriage of an Educated Man to an Untutored Woman

What Is the Effect Upon the Two and Especially Upon Their Strange and Beautiful Child Laurel?

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Stella Dallas and her husband, Stephen, do not live together. They have a daughter, thirteen years old, named Laurel, who stays most of the year with the mother. These two are now at a Summer hotel in New England, where the other guests look askance at the painted, overdressed elder woman. The time has come for Laurel to visit her father in New York. He meets her at the station and takes her to a hotel. She goes to visit Mrs. Morrison.

By OLIVE HIGGINS PROUTY

Author of "Bobbie, General Manager," "The Fifth Wheel," "The Star in the Window," Etc.

"AND how did you like Mrs. Morrison?"

Gazing up at the moon, Laurel replied fervently: "I think Mrs. Morrison is the loveliest lady I ever knew."

"Do you?" her father exclaimed; "oh, do you, Lollie, dear?"

Lollie! Suddenly Laurel stiffened inside the long coat. Lollie!

"I mean," she added, with the exaltation all gone out of her voice, "I mean next to—next to—" it had to be. She couldn't avoid the word—"next to my mother."

All the rest of the way back to the hotel Laurel didn't once glance up at the moon. How could she—oh, how could she have become a part of the picture on the screen, while her mother was still in the audience, out there, in the dark, looking on.

After Mrs. Dallas had said goodby to Laurel, she retraced her steps along the narrow platform beside the train, and immediately sought refuge in the ladies' public dressing room in the station. Standing in front of the long horizontal mirror with the row of wash basins beneath, she removed her hat and veil, and leaning forward drew one of the basins full of steaming water. With her bare hands she bathed her smarting eyes and smeared cheeks.

The hot water was as soothing as hot soup to a sore throat. She dried her face and hands on a piece of crepe paper from a roll near by. Afterwards, opening a little red leather case which she always carried with her, she laid it before her on the washstand, first blowing into it, once or twice, to remove a little of the lose pink powder that had shaken out of its container, and was as thick as dust in a carpet-sweeper.

Briskly, in a business-like fashion, Mrs. Dallas proceeded to remedy the damage wrought by her tears, working dexterously with various little sticks and tubes, without any attempt at concealment, apparently without the slightest self-consciousness, although just beside her a prim school-teacherish looking little woman, middle-aged, observed her operations with interest. Just when her cheeks presented their customary velvety appearance, her eyes suddenly welled up again with tears. She closed the lids tight. No use. The tears oozed out, streaked her cheeks again.

"Oh, darn it!" she whispered into the hollow of her hands as she pressed her fingers hard against eyeballs. "Oh, Lollie, Lollie, darn it, darn it!"

Twice she was forced to repeat her operations, and at last gave up the struggle for perfection, satisfying herself with a bit of powder on her nose, trusting that the white veil would suffice to conceal her.

She had planned to spend an hour or two in the shops, take a sandwich and cup of coffee in a candy-shop a little later, and go to a movie afterwards. It was wholly by accident that she ran across Alfred Munn.

The route she selected to the shops carried her through the outskirts of the wholesale merchandise district of the city. Alfred Munn's present business had something to do with leather or hides—or was it cotton—something of the sort. She ran across Alfred Munn (or rather he ran across her—he saw her before she saw him) at a restraunt.

It had occurred to tSella as she walked away from the station that a cup of coffee would probably help to brace her up better than anything else, and, as it was really time for lunch anyhow, she decided to drop into a certain restaurant she knew about, instead of the candy-shop farther uptown. It a restaurant where Alfred Munn had taken Laurel and her to lunch one day two years ago. She hadn't seen him since. As she entered it, she observed that men predominated.

She hastened to the dressing room at the rear. Stella Dallas felt as uncomfortable in the restaurant with her face all red and splotchy, as the school-teacherish little woman would have felt in her stocking feet.

It was with no thought of any man in particular that she set to work again to make herself presentable, now that she had herself under better control; or, at least, with no serious thought of any man in particular. She was always playing with the possibility that some old admirer might run across her path at any moment, and always taking necessary precautions.

Prepared as her cheeks may have been, Stella was taken by surprise when somebody leaned across the little table which she had selected beside the wall mirrors and drawled in a masculine voice, "Well!"

She knew it was Alfred Munn before she looked up. Nobody else in the world could say "Well," like that. All sorts of interesting implications were packed into the single exclamation.

She glanced up and replied briefly, her blue eyes sparkling at him, "Hello!"

She didn't like Ed Munn. Stephen had been right. He was cheap. It showed now that he wasn't dressed in his riding clothes any more. But even if she didn't like him very much, she couldn't be horrid to him. Stella Dallas couldn't be horrid to anybody whose eyes flattered her like that!

"What are you doing here?" he asked in a kind of caressing tone, as irresistible to the lonely Stella as food by whomever offered if she were hungry.

"I'm waiting for you!" her voice caressed back at him. Oh, a little harmless flirting was the one thing she needed to restore her wilted spirits!

Alfred Welcomes Attention

Alfred Munn smiled at her, showing a row of little crooked yellow teeth. His face crackled up into a hundred pleased wrinkles. Attention from the opposite sex was as welcome to him as it was to Stella.

He drew out the chair opposite Stella, thinking, as he did so, "What have I got on for this afternoon anyhow? Only two appointments; I can cancel 'em." What he said was, as he sat down, "Where's the offspring?"

Stella thought, "Dear me! How thrilling! He's going to stay!" But out loud she said, "Just shipped her to New York."

"You alone?" Alfred Munn exclaimed. "Unattached? No string tied to you?"

Alfred Munn drew in a deep breath. Let it out audibly.

"My! This is my lucky day, I guess," he ejaculated. "We're going to have lunch together—you and I, and go to a show afterwards. Did you know it?"

"Well," masterfully, "you know it now. Here, pass me that menu."

It pleased Alfred Munn. He summoned a waiter with an arrogant motion of his hand, tossed the menu aside, as wholly beneath his notice, and frowningly ordered cocktails—this was before prohibition—oysters, and soup. Then he leaned across the table and suddenly became all soft suavity. The contrast was effective.

"How've you been?" he asked.

"Oh, pretty well, I guess," she purred again, and glanced up, her big Delft-blue eyes gazing straight into Alfred Munn's little pig-like spots of brightness, rimmed round with the puffy lids.

"I don't care," Stella thought to herself in defense of the things she was allowing her bold eyes to imply to Alfred Munn. "It's only for today, and I'm perfectly aware of what he is—dissipated, rotten old thing, probably. Doesn't hurt me any if he is. I'm beyond hurting now. He's better than nobody."

Stella had almost forgotten what a cocktail tasted like. How it did bring back the good old happy days, when everybody admired flattered, just as Alfred Munn was doing now. For he was doing just that to Stella—over-doing it a little.

Stella Looked Young

Well, she could stand a little over-doing in that line. It had been so long since any man had found her attractive! Or, at least, since any man had told her so. She had begun to fear that age had got a grip on her at last which she couldn't loosen, however much she strained.

Men hated old women. Alfred Munn restored her self-confidence wonderfully. He found her pleasing. He found her desirable. He told her the very sight of her made him feel young again. Asked her how in the world she did it. How she managed to keep her wonderful peaches-and-cream appearance. She didn't look to him a day over twenty-five!

"Oh," thought Stella, feeling all warm and comforted inside, "if only he could see me in an evening gown!"

WHAT THE STARS SAY

LUCKY DAY TO TRAVEL

HOSTILE forces dominate on this day, with the lunar forces threatening all sorts of perplexity and difficulty. With the moon in opposition to three of the important planets, it may be necessary to meet the foes of astral opposition with courage and fortitude. Those in the employment of others are urged to be particularly discreet in contact with their superiors, and all are admonished to avoid speculation or other risk of finances.

It will be a good day to travel.

A child born on this day may require very early training and [illegible]scipline, especially in the im[illegible]rtance of veracity and responsibility.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

Ann Lisle

"I'M all right if you don't nag me into a fever," replied Jim gruffly.

"If there's nothing I can do for you I'll go see the cook about dinner," I said slowly. "We didn't know you were coming."

As I made my escape Jim's voice followed me with an accusing and scornful:

"This would have been a fine time to have Ruth and Gracia to dine when you don't even know if there's enough for me!"

I didn't answer. What was the use of explaining that for myself an egg and a bit of salad would have done, but that I always had plenty in the house to take care of several extra? The melon I ordered before the eggs, which now became an entree with asparagus tips, and the cold ham and salad, with a deep-dish currant pie, wouldn't have embarrassed me as an impromptu meal for any number of extra guests. But I made up my mind that we would eat our dinner in peace no matter what rumbling of dissension followed after, and we did.

Hardly were we established in the living room, with Jim comfortably resting on the couch, when he said abruptly:

"You and Gracia seemed to be on a friendlier footing—by Jove! When did you meet her?"

Jim's eyes darkened with sudden suspicion and a look of curt demand. There was nothing I could offer him save the unvarnished truth.

"I was sent for when first you were hurt," I said quietly.

"You were!" he exclaimed. "By Jove, who sent for you?"

"Mrs. MacAvoy," I replied quickly.

Jim's tone roused me and I answered with verve:

"But I did come. Ralph Lacy drove me hours across country and up and down strange roads. I didn't know how badly hurt you were. I felt for a time that this might be one of Rosa's rare jokes. Sending for me to come to Miss Gregory's house sounded like a thing Rosa might consider clever.

"I telephoned. You see, the first message came to Aunt May while I was at Dreamwold. Mrs. MacAvoy urged me to hurry. So on we came—with strange emotions making me dizzy. But when I reached Miss Gregory's house they thought it best I shouldn't see you."

I ended lamely, not daring to tell Jim that I had sat all night in the room where he lay unconscious. Even now I felt it wouldn't be well to let him discover how very sick he had been.

"What do you keep whining 'Miss Gregory's house' for? asked Jim irritably. "You sound as if to go there were like going to the guillotine."

"It was," I confessed, thinking back to the unhappiness of going to Jim from that difficult interview with Jeanie at Dreamwold. "I—I—Jim, I didn't know until I got there that you were unconscious and hadn't asked for me. If I'd known that I'm not sure I should have found the courage to"——

"And why not?" —Jim curtly interrupted.

It seemed as if he—who always does everything in his power to avoid a discussion or a scene—were actually inviting one now.

"To Miss Gregory's?" I said, slowly. "I've never had any reason to feel that I'd had welcome addition to any party Miss Gregory might be giving. She hasn't asked me. You haven't minded having me omitted"——

"Are you going all over that again?" asked Jim, wearily.

YOUR BEAUTY

A SERIES OF PRACTICAL TALKS

By Maria Jeritza

Famous Prima Donna of Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day

HAVE you ever breathed a deep, happy sigh of relief when some piece of good news lifted all anxiety from your mind?

Well, that is the way you should breathe all the time—with deep, steady inhalations followed by even, rhythmic exhalations.

By this I do not mean that you should worry about your breathing. In fact, that worried effort would destroy all the good of the deep breathing.

Perhaps the best recipe for deep breathing is to keep happy, look on the bright side and never allow your thoughts to grow discouraged and depressed. For this happy thinking will give you new courage and energy and with renewed energy you will instinctively breathe deeply and well.

The woman who always breathes deeply is a woman with fine chest and shoulder development, bright eyes, naturally-red lips and a clear complexion in which the quick color comes and goes.

This is the first breathing exercise:

Stand erect with your arms extended straight to the front, your weight resting on the balls of your feet. Now breathing naturally, force your arms backward and downward quickly without bending your elbows and try to touch the tips of your fingers behind your back. Repeat ten times.

Stand easily erect with your feet together. Step forward with your right foot, raising your arms straight out at your sides. Bend your right knee, letting your weight rest upon your right leg. As you return to position, inhale. Repeat, stepping forward and kneeling with the left leg. Do this exercise ten or twelve times each morning.

Deep breathing is perfectly natural for a healthy person and is not the result of strained effort. You should be able to enjoy it in relaxed natural fashion.

The great advantage of the deep-breathing exercises, aside from the fact that they are an enjoyable outlet for your energy, is that they will accustom you to breathing deeply, so that when you are out of doors you will, without effort, inhale deep draughts of delightful, beauty-giving fresh air.

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

Affirmed Lord Byron in his famous "Childe Harold."

"The sinews of war."

"The cornerstone of a nation."

Longfellow, in his "Courtship of Myles Standish," applies this term to Plymouth Rock, the Pilgrim's landing place.

"A daughter of the gods, divinely tall."

"Revenge is sweet."

So says many an unthinking person. But Milton, in "Paradise Lost," assails this idea. Revenge, he says, "at first though sweet, bitter ere long, back on itself recoils."

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

THE latest fad among girls is to carry dice in their hand bags. This is a good idea, because when a fellow takes a dame out to lunch she can shake him to see who pays for the check.

SHE can also roll the bones to determine whether he has to take her home in a taxicab or put her on the street car.

BUT if she throws a "seven" she has to walk.

WHEN a guy takes a girl to the theatre he shouldn't have to pay for the leather that she wears out walking home.

A LOT of girls are also choosing their husbands by throwing dice. Can you imagine how proud a man would be to say, "My wife won me in a crap game?"

STILL, a couple who win each other with African sugar stand more chance of being well suited than people who have been engaged for ten years.

MARRIED folks ought to settle their divorces this way. One guy claimed there was more justice in a pair of dice than there was in all the court rooms in the country.

OF COURSE you'll have to watch out that cupid doesn't play with [illegible]

ONCE-OVERS

BE PROMPT TO PAY MEMBERS OF YOUR FAMILY WHAT YOU OWE.

When you borrow in business or even among friends you are prompt in re-paying, but your family—it seems different.

Isn't it true that you let your debts to your family, individually or collectively, slip along and slip by, and you fail to pay them even with several reminders?

You are as much obligated to pay back to your relatives as you are when you borrow from the bank or a friend outside.

It is so easy to borrow a couple of dollars "until pay-day," and it is also easy to neglect to return the money when promised.
